ADDRESS.

There are some subjects on which a writer cannot expect to acquire celebrity ; he must be satisfied if he is usefully employed, and receives the approbation of his readers.

Dr. Johnson justly remarks, that "in all places, where there are objects worthy of detail or observation, there should be a short printed Directory, for the use of the stranger."

What Dr. Johnson suggests, the Publishers have endeavoured to accomplish for the Inhabitants and Visitors of GLOUCESTER and CHELTENHAM, by giving plain, but accurate descriptions of each place, followed by copious lists of the commercial and private residents ; detailing not only interesting objects and customs of past times, but also directing their attention to the present state of each locality, thus furnishing "A Guide for the Visitor," and "A Book of daily Reference for the Resident."

In presenting this DIRECTORY, the Compilers return their sincere thanks to their numerous Patrons for the very liberal encouragement they have been pleased to bestow on them. They also beg leave to acknowledge the courtesy with which they and their Agents have been received while collecting the necessary materials ; and tender their grateful acknowledgments to those Gentlemen who have contributed so largely from their valuable stores of local information.

With the most sanguine feelings they now submit the product of their labour to public opinion ; and should it be favourably received, they propose publishing a new edition for next year (with considerable additions and improvements), when it will be their study, regardless of time or expense, to leave nothing undone that may render it worthy of general acceptance.

CHELTENHAM

Is a market town, parliamentary borough, and parish in the hundred and union of its name, situate in the first or eastern division of the county of Gloucestershire, in $51^{\circ} 51'$ north latitude, and $2^{\circ} 5'$ west longitude. Distant 95 miles W.N.W. of London, 44 N.N.E. of Bristol, 43 N.N.E. of Bath, 40 W.N.W. of Oxford, 48 S. of Birmingham, 25 S.S.E. of Worcester, 34 S.E. of Hereford, 44 S.S.W. of Leamington through Warwick, 9 E.N.E. of Gloucester, 9 S.S.E. of Tewkesbury, 14 N.E. of Stroud, 15 N.N.W. of Cirencester, and contained, by the census of 1841, 31,411 inhabitants, and 5664 houses.

The town is delightfully situated upon rising ground, near the centre of the county, in a lovely, fertile and extensive vale, watered by the winding stream of the diminutive Chelt, and sheltered from the northern and eastern winds by the Malvern hills, and by the immense amphitheatre of the Cotswold hills, which latter abruptly terminate about 2 miles east of the town. The site, although high, is open only to the south and west, which, combined with the peculiar salubrity of its air, and the medicinal efficacy of its springs, renders it a desirable winter residence, especially for those whose pulmonary organs are weak. It contains numerous handsome streets; of these High street is the principal, extending nearly east and west one mile and a half in length; on either side are fine ranges of buildings, principally built of brick cemented, while here and there a few ancient houses left standing, serve to chequer the scene; right and left of this noble thoroughfare, various streets branch off, displaying verandahs and areas, with elegant and tasteful varieties of architectural decorations, amidst trees and shrubs of luxuriant foliage.

Many opinions are given respecting the derivation of its name, some antiquarians deriving it from the Saxon words Chilt and Ham, the first denoting an elevated place, and the latter a farm or village, whilst other etymologists, and perhaps with more probability, believe it takes its name from the Chelt, or Chilt, the rivulet before alluded to. In Domesday book it is called Chinteneham, and was claimed by William the Conqueror as a royal manor, being formerly held by Edward the Confessor; all the lands which had been in the possession of Edward were by the commissioners employed in compiling Domesday book, set down as crown property, and inserted under the title of "Terra Regis."

The manor of Cheltenham continued in the possession of the crown until the reign of King John, who in the year 1199 exchanged it for other lands with Henry De Bohun, Earl of Hereford; subsequently the manor passed through various hands, but again reverted to royalty, in the person of James I. Prince Charles in 1628 sold the manor and hundred to John Dutton, Esq. for £1200.: this gentleman died in 1656, and was succeeded by his nephew, William Dutton, Esq. who dying without issue, the property devolved to Sir Ralph Dutton, Bart. to whom succeeded his son, Sir John Dutton, Bart. who dying without issue in 1742, bequeathed his estates to his nephew, James Lennox, Esq. of Ireland, who assumed the name and arms of Dutton; he died in 1776, and was succeeded by James Dutton, Esq. who on May 11th, 1784, was created an English peer by the title of Lord Sherborne, Baron Sherborne of Sherborne in the county of Gloucester; in the year 1811 his Lordship conveyed the manor and hundred to his son, the Hon. John Dutton, now the Right Hon. Lord Sherborne; who in March 1843 sold the same with all its rights and privileges to James Agg Gardner, Esq. for the sum of £39,000. having been in the possession of the Sherborne family for 215 years.

At an early period Cheltenham possessed the privileges of holding markets and fairs, as Leland, who wrote in the time of Henry VIII., describes it thus:—"Chiltenham, a large towne, havynge a market. It belonged to the abbey of Cirencester, now to the kyng. There is a brook on the south side of the town." On the day before the desperate battle of Tewkesbury, Edward IV. halted and refreshed his whole army, as we learn from Holinshed. "On this Fridaie, king Edward, at length he came with all his armye into a village called Chiltenham, like a five miles' distance from Tewkesberie. King Edward therefore made no long delaie, but took a little refection himselve and caused his people to doo the like; this done, he set forward towards his enimies, and lodged that night in a field, not past three miles distant from them." In the civil war between Charles I. and his parliament, Cheltenham was occupied by a brigade of cavalry in the king's service, and commanded by Lords Grandistone and Chandos. On September 5th, 1643, the Earl of Essex, with forces amounting to 10,000 men, appeared on the hills above Prestbury, and soon afterwards encamped at Cheltenham, whence they marched to Gloucester, upon which the siege was abandoned by the royal army. In 1712 Cheltenham was described by Sir Robert Atkyns as a market town, deriving a considerable trade from making malt; containing 321 houses and a population of 1500, 200 of whom were freeholders.

Cheltenham, previous to the discovery of its spas, was an inconsiderable and straggling town,—a stream of water pursued its rippling course through the centre of the High street, refreshing as it went, and cooling the air above it in the summer time, whilst it administered at once to the cleanliness of the town and the comfort and convenience of its inhabitants. At regular intervals, a passage, from one side of the street to the other, was effected by stepping stones, and such was the depth of the water, that many a careless or unwary foot has immersed the heedless passenger at least knee-deep in cold water.

Cheltenham was enfranchised by the Reform Act, which empowered it to send one member to the House of Commons.* Town Commissioners are appointed by Act of Parliament, 2nd George IV., for framing local laws, and the borough is included with the county police; a large force is kept here, it being the head quarters and the residence of the chief constable; county magistrates sit every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, for public business, at the public office in High street. The town is excellently paved, and brilliantly lighted with gas, and the inhabitants obtain a plentiful supply of water from the neighbouring hills, about two miles east of the town, which water is conveyed 1800 yards by an iron pipe, 5 inches in diameter, to a large stone reservoir 80 feet square, and 10 feet deep, and thence by mains through all the principal streets. Coals, both from Stafford and the forest of Dean, are brought by a tram road, communicating with the docks at Gloucester.

* In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Cheltenham returned two members to Parliament.

The market on Thursday is amply supplied from the surrounding country with meat, vegetables, fruit, poultry, eggs, butter, &c., beside which the shops in the town daily exhibit the necessaries and luxuries of life in great abundance; meat here is remarkably fine, while from the proximity of the railway, fish of every sort in its season is always at hand; indeed epicures may meet with every delicacy that their fastidious tastes can desire at this London-like emporium; there is also a market for corn, which is sold by sample, on Thursday. Fairs are held on the second Thursday in April, Holy Thursday, August the 5th, 2nd Thursday in September and 3rd Thursday in December; and statute fairs called "Mops" on the Thursday preceding and on Thursday following old Michaelmas day.

The Hotels and Inns are of the first order and replete with every comfort and convenience; there is nothing remarkable in the structure of any of them, excepting the Queen's Hotel, which is a stately edifice of the Grecian order, adorned with Corinthian columns, surmounted by a handsome pediment, occupying (with its appurtenances) the whole of the south side of Imperial square, and from its extent, position and magnificence, forms a prominent object, being one of the most imposing architectural ornaments of the town; its interior, capable of accommodating 300 persons, is elegantly fitted up and commands pleasing and picturesque prospects; immediately overlooking a nursery ground, a promenade and a drive of about half-a-mile in length, reaching down to the High-street, and planted with double rows of ornamental trees in great variety, whose waving umbrage forms on each side graceful and shady avenues for pedestrians. In the entrance hall is a handsome stone statue of her present Majesty in her coronation robes, sculptured by Mr. Papera, of this town.

Cheltenham possesses the advantage of railway communications with the west and north of England, by means of the Bristol and Birmingham line, the station being about one mile and a half distant from the town; at present passengers for the metropolis are conveyed by this route to Gloucester, thence, via Great Western rail. The Great Western Railway Company are now constructing a branch to unite with the Gloucester and Swindon Junction line, thus avoiding the break of guage and circuitous route to the former place, leaving it about two miles to the west; a station house is now erecting for this Company on the far-famed nursery-ground of Mr. C. H. Jessop; but doubtless ere long a more direct communication with London, &c., will shortly be effected, parliamentary notices for the ensuing session having been given by two powerful Companies, viz. : the North Western and Great Western, to construct a line to this place,—the first-named Company's branching from their trunk line at Tring, then by way of Thame, Oxford, Witney, &c.,—while the plan of the latter is an extension from their terminus at Oxford.

Cheltenham derives its importance and celebrity from its mineral springs or spas, which vary in proportions, containing chalybeate, aperient neutral salts, sulphate of soda, sulphate of magnesia and oxide of iron, and are highly useful in disorders of the digestive organs, indigestion, hypochondriasis, bilious and feminine complaints, visceral obstructions, costiveness, organic, nephritic and inflammatory diseases, cutaneous eruptions, scrofula, tumours, &c.

The Royal and original Well was discovered accidentally in 1716, and in 1718 a small thatch shed was thrown over it; in 1738 the property devolved upon Captain Skillicorne, who first built a dome over the well; and in 1755 the present pump room was erected, in order that the increasing number of those who resorted to the waters might be more suitably accommodated. This Spa is on the south side of the town, about a quarter of a mile distant from the parish church; the approach to it is through a double row of lofty elm trees, planted in 1743 by Mr. Andrews, from a design by Lord Botetourt.

Cheltenham was visited by George III. in 1788, who remained some little time, drinking the waters of this well, from which it acquired the appellation of King's well; his Majesty occupied the late Lord Fauconberg's residence (now Bay's hill house, until very lately a private academy); and such was the influx of visitors at this time, that for apartments let the preceding season at three guineas per week, no less than twenty-five guineas per week were received, and in consequence of the overflow of Cheltenham, Tewkesbury and Prestbury were crowded.

Cambray Spas. The carbonated chalybeate is the only one of this description here, and was discovered in 1807; it is situate in Cambray gardens, from whence the water is conveyed by pipes to the Cambray Spa pump room, immediately under which is the well of the Aperient Saline Chalybeate, 66 feet deep; this water was discovered in 1834. The pump room, situate at the south end of Rodney terrace, is a very unique and elegant Gothic structure, and has a striking and picturesque effect.

Montpellier Spa, about half a mile south of High street, was established in 1809, by the late Henry Thompson, Esq. who purchased the De-la-Bere property near the old Wells, and commenced making experiments on the medicinal waters obtained on the estate. The original pump room being found too small from the increase of visitors, in 1817 the verandahs which surrounded it were removed and a handsome and commodious room erected in front of it, around which runs an elegant colonnade, while over the front entrance, leading into the pump room from the grand drive, is a lion couchant carved in stone, which has a very imposing effect. In 1826 Pearson Thompson, Esq. son and successor of the original proprietor, added the great rotunda, or magnificent circular room; from the ceiling of this elegant room rises a capacious dome, in the upper part of which is a lantern, admirably constructed for the admission of light. The diameter of the rotunda is 50 feet, and the height to the apex of the lantern 54 feet. The interior of this edifice is fitted up in the most splendid manner; the water is conveyed through crystal tubes, that are attached to the pump, which is surmounted with a beautiful model of the Warwick vase; the front of the counter is of Spanish marble, the chimney pieces are also black marble, while from the centre is suspended a costly chandelier; in fact the interior must be viewed ere its beauty can be duly appreciated. In this building concerts, balls, musical soirees, &c. are occasionally held. B. Papworth, Esq. was the architect of this structure.

Opposite the pump room is a spacious garden, having an extensive lawn pleasingly diversified with walks, shrubberies, parterres of flowers, &c., and sheltered from the solar rays by umbrageous trees of great beauty; here are also some splendid conservatories, stored with the choicest exotics; fronting these is an elegant Chinese pagoda, fitted up as an orchestra, while at the extreme end of the garden an ornamental fountain ejects its limpid element, refreshing and cooling the surrounding atmosphere. During the summer season musical promenades, fetes champetres, &c. both morning and evening, take place in these gardens and Montpellier Walks, when an excellent band performs every morning from eight to ten, and in the evening if the weather be favorable. Contiguous to Montpellier and Suffolk Square is the Park Estate, where is a handsome circular drive, 60 feet in width, and about a mile in extent, with promenades and plantations on either side; the walks and gardens are prettily laid out, and a lake, on which are many aquatic fowls, adds materially to the interesting scene. Around the park are a number of elegant detached mansions; in front of these are lawns judiciously planted with many varieties of evergreens, and crossed by serpentine or semicircular gravelled walks or drives leading up to the houses.

Pittville. This beautiful and improving quarter of Cheltenham is situate at the north part of the town, and was planned in the year 1824, when upwards of a hundred acres of land, the property of the late Joseph Pitt, Esq. were disposed of, under certain restrictions; the plan included a pump room, lawns, shrubberies, promenades, rides and drives, which comprise a circuit of nearly six miles in extent, and 120 acres of land, studded with elegant detached mansions, and highly respectable rows of handsome houses, while on either side of the walks and drives are well-trimmed hedges, overshadowed by many graceful trees; the larch, the birch, the weeping willow and wimpering ash, with here and there a proud laburnum's gold-like flowers, which seem to illumine the various shades of green, so grateful to the eye, contribute to enrich the view. At the northern extremity of this enchanting locality, on an acclivity about half a mile from the High street, stands

Pittville Spa, which was opened on July the 20th, 1830, the foundation being laid on the 4th of May, 1825, a grand masonic procession being formed for the occasion. The style of this noble building (said to be in imitation of the Temple on the Ilyssus at Athens), is Grecian Ionic; its exterior is 90 feet in length, and 43 feet in breadth, surrounded on three sides by a colonnade 20 feet wide; the roof is supported by Ionic pillars, surmounted with capitals; over the principal entrance is a colossal statue of Hygeia, while at each end of the wings are statues of Hippocrates and Æsculapius. In the centre is an elegant dome, 90 feet in height, richly ornamented with highly-wrought panels, and round its base runs a light tasteful gallery, encircled by an iron railing. This gallery commands a complete panoramic view of the town, while, if the atmosphere be propitious, the eye ranges over an expanse of country stretching away to the highlands at the southern and western extremities of the fertile vale of Gloucester, with the mountains of South Wales in the distance, and terminated on the north and east by the romantic Malvern and Cotswold hills.

The pleasure grounds in front of this classic pile exhibit the grandest effects of landscape gardening, being elegantly laid out in walks, lawns, flower parterres and shrubberies, charmingly diversified with a rich profusion of choice evergreens and ornamental trees, and, to render this locality still more attractive, a verdant lawn leads to the margin of a lake, where objects of great beauty meet the view; its mirror-like surface being ornamented with a miniature frigate, and occasionally rippled by the rapid motion of majestic swans, which proudly float upon its quiet bosom, and greatly tend to animate the scene. Around the lawn is a grand promenade adorned at each end by a handsome stone bridge, the opposite shore is covered with flowering shrubs; the ash, the weeping willow and the drooping birch, break the line of the more distant parts:

Here rising boughs with summer's pride adorn
The tranquil lake, the ever-verdant lawn;
Whilst gently perching on the leafy spray
Each feathered warbler tunes his various lay.

Indeed every thing appears to increase the charms of a spot so rich in the combined beauties of nature and art.

The Montpellier Baths are situated in the Bath road, and contain cold, tepid, hot, shower, douche, steam, hot air, vapour, chlorine, medicated, and every variety of bath, constructed agreeably to the most modern improvements; all the baths are lined with marble or Dutch tile, and the interior of this commodious building admirably fitted up for its intended purposes; the swimming bath is 75 feet in length, and 25 wide, heated from 75 to 80°; adjoining this is a cold plunging bath. Attached to the Baths are rooms fitted up with suitable apparatus, for the application of medical galvanism, and electricity; here is also an extensive

Laboratory for manufacturing Cheltenham salts, which are produced by evaporation from mineral waters, brought by pipes from immense reservoirs at some little distance; these reservoirs are filled by pumps from large wells sunk for the purpose at Montpellier.

Royal Victoria Baths are at 61, High street, originally opened in 1787, and were the first established in the town; they consist of hot, vapour, saline, shower, Whitlaw's patent medicated, &c. &c.

Hydropathic Institution, Sherborne house and Sherborne villa. This establishment, conducted by Dr. Balbirnie, M.A. M.D., is in an open and pleasant part of the town, between Pittville and Hewlett's road; the houses are large, commodious, and well furnished, fitted up on the ground floor with two large plunge baths in each, laid with glazed tiles. Here are rooms for hot air and vapour baths, which have this improvement upon other baths of the same sort, viz.—that the head is left out, so that the patient breathes the pure fresh air let into the apartment, and can regulate the heat and duration of the bath as he wishes. The separation of this establishment into the ladies' and gentlemen's departments, merely refers to the arrangements of the bed-rooms, baths, &c., in other respects the establishment is one, the patients of the same class all meeting at one table, and having the use of one drawing room.

The Assembly Rooms, erected by the late J. D. Kelly, Esq., at an expense of £60,000., on the south side of High street, between the Plough Hotel and Cambray, is an extensive building, with a neat portico entrance; it contains handsome suites of rooms,* the ball room merits particular notice, being 80 feet in length, 40 in width, and 40 in height, finished and decorated in the most superb style, and brilliantly lighted by eleven glass chandeliers suspended from the ceiling; on the 29th July, 1816, it was opened, when the Duke and Duchess of Wellington were present, with the

*In this establishment is a superb suite of Club rooms, extending the entire length of the building, conducted somewhat on the plan of the London clubs, being under the control of a committee of management, who are elected annually from amongst the yearly members, principal nobility and gentry of the county; the ante-rooms are fitted up for refreshments, cards, billiards, &c.; dress balls take place weekly during the winter season, which are generally attended by the nobility and elite of the town and vicinity, under the superintendence of Captain A. H. Kirwan, master of the ceremonies, who also presides over the summer balls held in the Montpellier Rotunda.

Lord Northwick's Picture Gallery, at Thirlestone house, situated on the Bath road, and built by the late Mr. Scott, at an expense of £60,000.; it was purchased by the present proprietor at Mr. Scott's death; Lord Northwick has added considerably to the building, forming a magnificent picture gallery 210 feet in length, the walls being decorated with specimens by the ancient and modern masters. This exhibition is open to the public almost daily, from one to four o'clock, the visitor merely writing his or her name in a book kept for that purpose.

Photographic Portrait Institution. This establishment, situate in the Imperial Nursery Gardens Promenade, is open daily for taking portraits, &c. upon the inimitable and much admired Daguerreotype plan.

A Theatre, which formerly stood in Bath street, was destroyed by fire in May 1839, and no new one has been erected, although several attempts have been made to revive dramatic representations, without success; but here is a choral society, Euterpean society, and a glee club, and in the season horticultural and floral exhibitions frequently take place.

Hunting is a favorite diversion at Cheltenham, and Earl Fitzhardinge, who resides here from November to April, keeps a noble stud of horses, and a pack of fox hounds, which during that season hunt five days a week; besides which, in the neighbourhood are the Heythrop hounds (Lord Redesdale's), the V. W. S. or (Vale of White horse) and Worcestershire packs; the Cheltenham Stag hounds are supported by subscription, and are under the management of a committee, hunting three days a week when Earl Fitzhardinge is away; in the vicinity are the Brockworth harriers. Races were until 1830 run at Cleeve downs, but are now discontinued; Steeple chases however take place in the spring, under the patronage of the gentlemen of the "Berkeley Hunt." Here are two Cricket clubs, viz. the Wellington and the Cheltenham.

A Literary and Philosophical Institution was established in 1833, for the cultivation of literature and science, and the preservation of such works of art as tend to illustrate the progress of discovery and civilization. Previous to 1836 this society held its meetings in the Imperial Pump Room, situate where the "Queen's Hotel" now stands. On the 30th August, 1836, the present edifice, erected on the east side of Imperial Promenade, was opened by the Lord Bishop of Gloucester; it contains a lecture room, museum, a committee room, laboratory, with philosophical instruments for the illustration of lectures, and use of the members; the front of this building is an exact resemblance of the temple of Theseus at Athens, having a noble portico supported by six fluted columns.

The public libraries, news and reading rooms, are excellently supplied with both ancient and modern works, together with all the newspapers and periodicals of the day, and are as follows:—

Lee's Royal Library, 384, High street, near the Plough Hotel, is the oldest circulating library in Cheltenham; it contains many thousand volumes of standard literature, in theology, biography, history, voyages, travels, &c.; the reading room, which is 80 feet long, opens into a large garden, giving it a very picturesque appearance, and is well supplied with all the London newspapers and popular periodicals, also the Irish, Scotch, Welsh and provincial papers; the library is constantly being increased, as every new work of merit and interest is purchased as soon as published for the use of subscribers.

Williams's English and Foreign Library, adjoining the Assembly Rooms, is nearly 100 feet in length, and contains an ample selection from the productions both of the home and foreign press. The reading rooms in the rear of the shop are fitted up with the utmost attention to the ease and comfort of subscribers. In the catalogue of this library will be found all that can be required, either by the most fastidious littérateur or the lovers of romance and light reading; and the London and provincial journals, with the leading periodicals, are always at hand. The proprietor has also a collection of very scarce old books, well deserving the inspection of those who are interested in the literature of the "olden time."

Wight and Bailey's Theological Library, Promenade, contains a large and well-selected stock of modern divinity, reprints from the olden divines, and standard works in the usual branches of literature; the circulating library consists of standard and modern works in theological, historical, and miscellaneous literature.

Lovesy's Imperial Library, opposite the Imperial Hotel, is a well-conducted establishment fitted-up with every attention to the comfort and convenience of its numerous subscribers. The circulating library is large, and is well-supplied with all new publications of merit and general interest, in theology, history, biography, voyages, travels, periodicals and miscellaneous literature, immediately on their appearing; the reading-room is liberally supplied with all the principal London and provincial papers, magazines, reviews, &c.

Davies's Montpellier Library is situate adjoining the Montpellier Rotunda; the reading room is well-supplied with the London daily and weekly papers, with magazines, reviews, periodicals, history, biography, romance and other works of interest and literature; this library, from its contiguity to the Spa, forms a cool retreat, and is a favorite resort during the summer season.

The Church of England Reading Association was established in 1839, for the use of the humbler classes of the Church of England; it has a reading room, and occasionally lectures are given on literary and scientific subjects. It is situate in Regent street, and the president is the Rev. F. Close.

The sacred edifices comprise six churches under the establishment, besides chapels for various religious denominations, including a Friends' Meeting House and a Jews' Synagogue.

St. Mary's, the parish church, situate about the centre of the town, slightly to the south of High street, is an ancient cruciform structure in the Gothic style, and consists of a nave, a transept, two aisles and a chancel; a square tower rises from the intersections, surmounted by an elegant and lofty octagonal spire; the tower contains a peal of ten fine-toned bells; in the northern transept is a beautiful circular Gothic window, forty-three feet in circumference, divided into thirty-three compartments; the interior of this sacred edifice is 117 feet in length and $65\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, affording accommodation for nearly 2000 persons. The living is an endowed curacy. On the north side of the churchyard is an ancient stone cross, consisting of a single shaft rising from the centre of a square pedestal, on each side of which are three stone steps; doubtless this was one of the many parochial crosses* erected in the way leading to parish churches, in order "to inspire reverence for the mysteries which the people were about to witness."

Holy Trinity, situate at the north end of Portland street, is a modern erection, and considered to be a chapel of ease to St. Mary's; it was consecrated by the Bishop of Gloucester, April 11th, 1822, and consists of three aisles; in the centre and over the principal entrance is a tower, surmounted by 8 light pinnacles; the building is 74 ft. long and 51 in breadth, accommodating 900 persons, and cost about £10,000., principally defrayed by the munificence of Lord Sherborne.

St. John's, situate at the west side of Berkeley street, was finished in 1829, and consecrated on January 22nd in that year; it is a handsome structure, the entrance being ornamented with lofty pillars, and the interior neat and commodious, capable of holding about 800 persons.

St. James's is in Suffolk square, and was built by private subscription, consecrated October 6th, 1830, by the Rev. Dr. Monk, bishop of the diocese; the style of architecture is strictly Gothic, its west front is much admired, and the interior (which contains a fine-toned and powerful organ, by Gray of London) exceedingly beautiful, capable of holding 1500 persons.

St. Paul's parochial church, situate on the north side of the High-street, at the end of St. Paul's-street, was erected in 1828, partly by voluntary contributions and partly by funds furnished by the Commissioners for building new Churches; its front presents an elevation of lofty pillars, above which is a handsome pediment, surmounted by an octagonal cupola; its interior provides accommodation for 1600 persons; the organ was presented by the late minister, the Rev. Sir H. Thompson, Bart.

* This cross has by some been referred to the reign of Edward I., but subsequent to that period crosses were raised in England. When the body of Queen Eleanor was conveyed from Lincolnshire to Westminster, such was the affection of that monarch for his deceased wife, that at every stage where the corpse rested, the king had a cross erected, and this was the origin of Charing Cross, London.

Christchurch, near Bay's hill, in the hamlet of Alstone, is a spacious and beautiful edifice, erected at an expense of £18,000., raised in £100. shares, and consecrated on the 26th January, 1840; it consists of a nave and a transept at the east end; at the west end is a handsome tower 174 feet high, built in the early English style, with highly enriched pinnacles; the summit of this tower commands fine views of the forest of Dean and the vales of Evesham and Malvern; the interior is handsomely and commodiously fitted up, and the pulpit is of beautifully carved stone; this edifice is capable of holding 2000 persons.

St. Philip's Church, situate in Leckhampton parish, is an exceedingly neat building, with a tower 86 feet high; consecrated for divine worship May 1st, 1840; it affords accommodation for about 800 persons.

Cheltenham Chapel, situate in St. George's place, was built by voluntary subscription, in 1809, under the auspices of the late Rev. Rowland Hill, who gave the pulpit and desks; the building measures 65 feet by 45, and will contain 1000 persons; by the deed the members are denominated protestant dissenters; the officiating minister is required to believe, preach, and maintain the doctrinal articles of the Church of England, as specified in the Toleration Act.

The Countess of Huntingdon's or Portland Chapel, in North place, was erected at the sole expense of Robert Capper, Esq.; its admeasurement is 67 feet by 42, and will hold 800 persons; beneath the chapel is a large school-room where children are instructed on the plan of the British and Foreign School Society.

Highbury Chapel, in Grosvenor street, originally erected for the Rev. Mr. Snow, a seceder from the Church of England, was purchased in 1827 by the late Thomas Wilson, Esq. and the Rev. G. Burder of Stroud, for the Independents or Congregationalists, by whom it was opened in 1831; it will contain about 1000 persons: attached to it are Sunday and Day Schools. The Tabernacle, in the Bath road, is also for Independents, capable of holding about 500 worshippers, and is under the superintendence of the officiating minister of Highbury chapel.

The Wesleyan Chapel, in St. George's street, erected in 1829, is a handsome square brick building, having a portico in front, and will hold 1000 persons; underneath the chapel are extensive rooms, used as schools. Bethesda Chapel, in Great Norwood street, also belongs to the Wesleyans.

Ebenezer Chapel, in King street, originally a Wesleyan Chapel, but for the last three years has been occupied by the Baptists. Bethel Chapel, in St. James's place, also belongs to the Baptists; this building was built in 1821, upon a much larger scale than its predecessor. Salem Chapel, in Clarence parade, opened June 6th, 1844, is a handsome and commodious building, capable of holding 1800 persons; its members are Baptists who maintain mixed communion.

The Unitarian Chapel, at Bay's hill, lately completed at a cost of £1600., is a neat edifice; its roof of open oak-work is much admired, being similar to that of Westminster hall.

The Society of Friends' Meeting House, in Manchester walk, is a neat stone building, and will contain about 400 persons.

Roman Catholic Chapel, situate in Somerset place, was opened in 1810; it is a commodious but plain erection, and will contain 300 persons. The Jews' Synagogue, in St. James's square, was built in 1839. Here is an endowed grammar school, a proprietary college school, and numerous charitable schools for the education of the less affluent.

The Free Grammar School was endowed in 1574, for 50 scholars, by Richard Pate, Esq. of Minsterworth, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; the nomination of head master is vested in Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where Richard Pate "had been brought up in good letters." Rev. W. H. Hawkins, B.D. rector of St. Aldate, Oxford, is the present head master.

Proprietary College School. The object of this institution is to provide for the sons of noblemen and gentlemen a sound classical, mathematical, and general education on moderate terms, and strictly in unison with the principles of religion, as taught by the united Church of England and Ireland. This beautiful building, situate in the Bath road, was opened on June 22nd, 1843; it is erected in the early English style of architecture, the frontage occupying an extent of 240 feet; in the centre is a handsome square tower 80 feet high, ornamented with battlements and turrets; the interior is commodious, elegantly fitted up, and remarkably well adapted for its intended purposes. This structure, which is of stone, principally from the quarries of

New Proprietary School, Belmont house, Winchcombe street. This Institution has been formed for the purpose of affording to the sons of gentlemen and tradesmen an efficient classical or commercial education; comprising such branches of useful knowledge as may be advantageously introduced, together with religious instruction on the principles of the Church of England.

A National School, upon Dr. Bell's system, was opened in the Town hall, on the 5th of June, 1816: subsequently a building was erected in the Bath road more suitable, and the school was transferred there January 6th, 1817. In 1836, extensive schools upon the same system were opened in St. Paul's street, contiguous to St. Paul's church. Near St. James's square is an Infant School, upon a large scale; here are also schools conducted upon the British and Foreign School Society, besides Sunday schools attached to almost all the churches and chapels. The charitable Institutions are numerous, and well supported.

In 1813, a Dispensary and Casualty Hospital was established; in 1839 it was enlarged, and made into a General Hospital and Dispensary. The Asylum for destitute female orphans, was founded by her late Majesty Queen Charlotte, in 1808. A provident clothing, and district visiting society was instituted in 1827, by the Rev. F. Close, remodelled and its operations extended in 1834; and a dispensary for the diseases of women and children was established in 1835; and a Coburgh or Lying-in Charity in 1817, on the occasion of the death of H. R. H. the Princess Charlotte; here is also a Loan Fund Society, conducted upon the most equitable principles; a Servants' Home, an Animals' Friend Society, with many other useful institutions, which are carefully watched over by their numerous benefactors and supporters.

Cheltenham, beside the advantages derived from a numerous located body of wealthy and influential personages, who cause a brisk trade in the necessaries and luxuries of life, is indebted to its classic and picturesque scenery for many visitors, generally the titled, the opulent, and invalids of the more affluent classes, who during the summer season arrive in throngs, not only to behold the fairest essay of Nature's skill and care, but to partake of its health-restoring waters, and inhale its pure and genial breezes, the extraordinary salubrity of which has long been proved by the longevity of its inhabitants; in fact, this is equally applicable to the whole of the county; at Cleeve, three miles distant, in the reign of James I. eight old men performed a morris dance, whose united ages made as many centuries; and it is remarkable that during the whole month of August, 1832, when cholera so awfully prevailed in the surrounding country, only 16 persons were interred in Cheltenham, and not one case of cholera occurred in the whole parish.

Post Office.—At the time of this going to press an alteration in the despatches is about taking place, in consequence of which, Post Office information will be found after classification of trades.
