PREFACE.

THE Publisher issues the present Volume conscious that no trouble or expense has been spared to make it reliable, and it clearly proves by the number of New Houses that appear in this work for the first time, that the wealth and fashion of the town is decidedly on the increase.

He cannot but return his sincere thanks to those who, in various ways, have very kindly assisted him, and would gladly welcome any future suggestions.

E. G. BUILT-LEONARD.

CHELTENHAM HOUSES WITH INTERESTING ASSOCIATIONS.

We have had enquiries from quite a number of Visitors as to the whereabouts of those houses in Cheltenham which have interesting associations attached to them.

For the benefit of our readers we give a list of the more important of these residences, some of which have been altered, and some remain practically the same as when occupied by the celebrities mentioned.

Alpha House, St. George's Road, for some time the home of Dr. Jenner, who first practised vaccination there, and treated a large number of patients gratuitously.

Brandon House, Painswick Road, the residence of Fredk. W. H. Myers, author of "St. Paul" and other poems, which still retain popularity.

Camden Villa, near Clarence Square—at the time of the poet Thomas Campbell's occupancy known as Birch Farm. Every schoolboy knows "Ye Mariners of England," the "Battle of Hohenlinden," and "The Battle of the Baltic"—all from Campbell's pen.

Coxhorne Farm, Charlton Kings (on the right of the London road), the home of Sydney Dobell, the poet, who wrote most of "The Roman" here.

Detmore, Charlton Kings, on the left of the London road, and reached by a turning nearly opposite the "Duke of York" inn. Here Miss Mulock, afterwards Mrs. Craik, wrote some chapters of "John Halifax, Gentleman," a novel in which the neighbouring town of Tewkesbury figures prominently.

Elborough Cottage, Old London Road, Charlton Kings, built about 1500, and traditionally reputed to have been the resting-place of Oliver Cromwell for two nights in 1643.

61 High Street, resided in for a little while by Adam Lindsay Gordon, pupil of Cheltenham College, steeplechase-rider and poet, who went to Australia, where most of his best verse was written.

430 High Street, visited by Lord Byron, and also by Thomas Haynes Bayly, the famous song-writer, to whom there is a tablet in St. James's Church. Bayly's grave may be seen in the old Parish Burying Ground, off Lower High Street.

40 Montpellier Terrace. William Makepeace Thackeray, author of "Vanity Fair" and other famous novels, stayed for a while.

Oxford Buildings, London Road, Sir Walter Scott stayed with some relatives in one of these, and took a course of the Waters with marked benefit.

The Priory, London Road. The Duke of Wellington a guest here in 1816.

10 St. James's Square. The Tennyson family in residence for some time. Alfred wrote part of "In Memoriam" there in 1849.

Thirlestaine House, corner of Thirlestaine road and Bath road, cost £80,000 to build, and for nearly 25 years was the seat of Lord Northwick, who had a fine collection of pictures, which were sold on his Lordship's death, in 1859, for nearly £100,000. The imitations of the Elgin Marbles on the exterior walls of this building are well worth seeing.
