REFORM OF THE CIRCUIT SYSTEM.
A beginning has been made—a very small one, it is true—with the reform of the circuit system. The Assizes and Quarter Sessions Bill, which the Lord Chief Justice has introduced into the House of Lords, and which was read a second time on Wednesday, provides that jurors who have been summoned to attend a Court of Assize or Quarter Sessions shall not be required to attend if within five days of the time appointed for the holding of the Court it appears to the Clerk of Assize or the Clerk of the Peace that there will be no business for them to transact. This will relieve jurors from the absurdity of having their time occupied by an empty ceremony. What, however, is still more important is the provision that, if notices are issued dispensing with the attendance of the jurors, "it shall not be necessary to hold the Court of Assize or Quarter Sessions in respect of which the notices have been given." This means that judges will no longer have to go through the farce of journeying to assize towns where there is nothing for them to do; and that the waste of judicial time, upon which some strong comments were made by several of the contributors to the symposium on the circuit system which appeared in our last issue, will undergo some slight reduction. Now that it is recognised that it is ridiculous for a High Court judge to journey to small assize towns where there is no business for him to transact; perhaps it will not be long before it is realised that the best judicial talent in the country can be better employed than in the punishment of larcenies.—"Law Journal."

THE TAXI-CAB.

Taxi-cabs have become such popular street vehicles in London that the demand for them is much greater than the supply. The taxi-cabs are used by all classes of people, day and night, at the uniform rate of 8d. a mile, and they present a most attractive appearance in chocolate, blue, yellow, red, and green hues, with chauffeurs in the brightest and smartest liveries. Although scarcely a year has passed since these swift-moving electric and petrol carriages appeared, the capital already invested in London taxi-cabs is £2,000,000. There are 758 taxi-cabs on the streets, 2,600 taxi-cabs on order, and 1,700 licensed drivers, an average of 55 certificates granted each week. There are eight London taxi-cab companies, the average day's takings of a taxi-cab being £3. The average cost of a London taxi-cab is £340, and its average takings are about £16 a week. Some chauffeurs already are buying their own taxi-cabs on the instalment plan, and the picturesque hansom is disappearing gradually, like the old-fashioned horse bus, which practically has been crowded aside by the motor omnibus.

HOW "COMMANDS" ARE ISSUED.

The mere sending out of the tickets of "command" to the various State entertainments entails very considerable labour. Every one of these goes through the Lord Chamberlain's department, this being the official who acts as the mouthpiece of the Sovereign in inviting the favoured subjects to partake of the royal hospitality. When the King decides to hold a Court, for example, tickets are at once issued in the ordinary course to the whole of the foreign diplomats and their staffs in London, as well as to a certain number of these courtiers who form the general circle. The date upon which this Court is to be held is then announced in the Press, and quickly applications to be present begin to pour into the Lord Chamberlain's office.

King Edward is consulted as to the approximate number of presentations he wishes to take place, and, however large this number may be, the applications quickly exceed it, and it then becomes a matter of some delicacy for the Lord Chamberlain and his assistants to decide what names to include in the lists and what to omit. When at length the list is ready for submission to the King and Queen it is accompanied by a supplementary list, showing the names of those who have had to be excluded. They go through these lists very carefully, adding some names and removing others as seems best.—"P.T.O."

ENGLAND.

I love thee, England, for the sake
Of those whose swords are turned to rust,
For those who for thy glory fell,
Whose bones have mouldered into dust.

I love thee, England, for the deep,
Deep love of those that died for thee,
That gave their hearts' best and their lives
To make thee strong and keep thee free.

I love thee, England, for the throng,
The martyr throng that faced the fire,
Who heeded not the faggots' glare,
And dared for thee the flaming pyre.

I love thee, England, for the song,
For Milton's soul—for Shakespeare's pen.
When shall we see such soaring souls?
The wide world echoes back, "Ah, when?"

I love thee, England, for the faith,
For Faith and Freedom, for the strong,
Strong dower of might, and all her great
Enduring fight against the wrong

I love thee, England, for the good
That wept for thee, that prayed for thee,
The Saints that bowed their hearts to death,
To win thee faith and liberty.

I love thee, England, for the whole
The brave, the good, the strong, the all
Who built and fought and prayed and sang,
That she should never once be thrall.

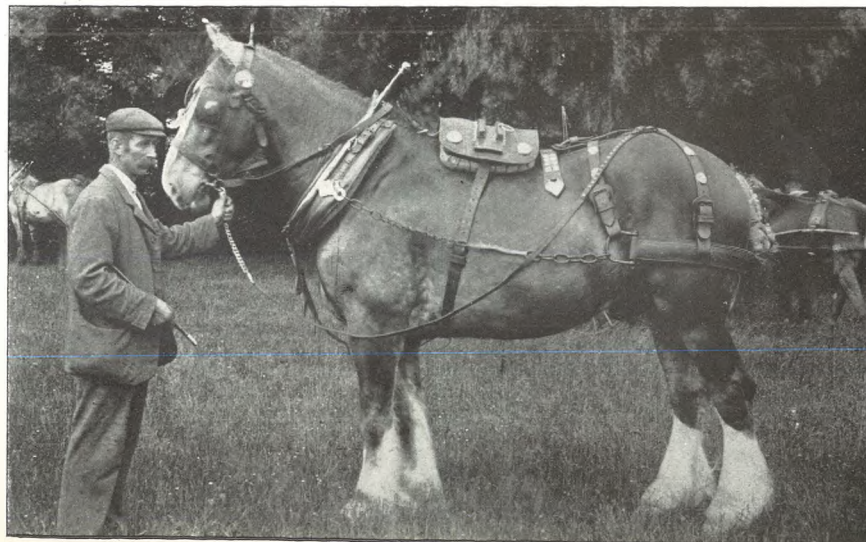

I love thee, England, for the sword,
I love thee, England, for the pen,
For sage and poet, pen and song,
And thy resplendent scroll of men.

A HUMAN PARALLEL.

Sometimes one meets an old friend, whom one had known well in dapper days of bachelorhood, when he was always as well-dressed as the tailors could manage, and cared little about the cost of the pleasure of the moment. Now, one is almost shocked, after the lapse of years, to find him taking the responsibilities and expenses of life very seriously, and wearing clothes that are almost shabby. A few minutes' conversation reveals the meaning of the change. He has daughters who are "out," a son at college, and other boys at school. A rather dilapidated blackbird which frequents my lawn and a very ragged hedgesparrow—which at the present moment is collecting all the crumbs it quickly can from the birdtable hanging outside my study window—offer parallels to the condition of this friend of our youth. They, too, go shabby and take their responsibilities very seriously, because their families are nearly grown up. Life that was merry enough for one is no laughing matter for man or bird when a large family depends upon your exertions.—"T.P.'s Weekly."

THE DOOM OF THE HORSE.

The biggest and best horse show ever seen in this or any other country took place in the very year when records were being broken for the first time on the new Brooklands Motor Track; and though I do not think that horses will ever disappear as completely as canals before railways, yet every serious observer must have realised by now (says Theodore A. Cook in "Cornhill") that the horse will soon take the same place, relatively to the various forms of motor-car, that sailing ships and yachts now take relatively to various forms of steamboats. For certain forms of trade sailing still hold its own, and yachting as a luxurious and splendid sport will never die; in precisely the same way the big, docile, strong cart horse will always find a place in our economy, and the luxury of driving four-in-hand, or riding to hounds across country will never be abandoned while England retains her national characteristics. But on the whole the horse, with the exception of a few expensive breeds, is doomed.

COOLING BY IMAGINATION.

If you sit and picture the waters coldly trickling and rushing over the stones in the ferny gloom of Welsh or Devonshire glens you will feel appreciably cooler than if you sit and deplore the heat, and declare that it is impossible to be comfortable. There are people who derive immense pleasure from planning tours which they never take. On the same principle we can keep cool.—“Lady's Pictorial.”

DIED JUNE 6, 1908, AGED 46 YEARS.

Mr. Walter Harvey, who recently died at the early age of 46, was head gardener to Sir Richard Biddulph Martin, Bart., of Overbury Court. He was an expert in all kinds of gardening work, and had considerable taste in interior decorations. One of the latest products of his activity was the Rock Garden at the Court, which was nearly completed when the Worcester and Gloucester Rifle meetings were held there last autumn. Mr. Harvey was a leading member of the Overbury Church choir, and took a large share in matters affecting the welfare of the village. A striking testimony to his popularity was witnessed at the funeral, when there was a large gathering of gentry and villagers.

VICAR OF EASTINGTON'S CAR “HUNG UP.”

The accident did not occur quite so long ago as A.D.1—to be exact, we believe it happened last Saturday, in an Elmore lane.

A FAREWELL.

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe in skies so dull and gray:
Yet, if you will, one quiet hint I'll leave you
For every day.

I'll tell you how to sing a clearer carol
Than lark who hails the dawn or breezy
down;
To earn yourself a purer poet's laurel
Than Shakespeare's crown.

Be good, sweet maid, and let who can be clever
Do lovely things, not dream them, all day long;
And so make Life, and Death, and that For Ever

One grand sweet song.

—Charles Kingsley.
