NEW CHURCH AT LONGWELL GREEN, NEAR BRISTOL.

The new church of All Saints', Longwell Green, Glos., was dedicated on Monday week by the Bishop of Bristol. The building is of local stone, and English Perpendicular in style. The fittings are made of oak, decorated with artistic hammered ironwork. Messrs. Prothero, Phillott, and Barnard, of Cheltenham, were architects for the building and fittings, Messrs. J. Long and Sons, of Bath, being the contractors. Messrs. R. E. and C. Marshall, of Cheltenham, carried out the hammered ironwork.

Rev. Edgar Neale's Tewkesbury Abbey Boys' Football Team, Season 1899-1900.

Back row:—T. W. Manning (Relieving Officer, Tewkesbury Union), A. Spencer (engineer, in Canada), A. Hobbs (printer, in Gloucester), C. Spencer (employed in Tewkesbury), J. Hopkins (Tewkesbury), Arch. Jones (Tewkesbury, proficient member of Rowing Club).

Front row:—Reggie Yarnall (draper, West Bromwich), G. Forty (Tewkesbury, proficient swimmer), Reggie Ashley (clerk, London), Albert E. Lewis (schoolmaster, Lingfield, Surrey), W. Lane (deceased).

In no department was the work of the Vicar of Charlton Kings (Rev. Edgar Neale), whilst curate of Tewkesbury Abbey, more noticeably successful than that amongst the young people, and his Boys' Guild (to which he acted as chaplain) had a membership of over 60, most of whom had been or still were in the choir or Sunday school. By his kind efforts they had their football and evening clubs for winter time recreation, and cricket club in the summer, and the Football XI, of which we print portraits acquired most creditable proficiency and scored good wins in matches with some Cheltenham and other clubs in the district during the season 1899-1900. All these "Boys" except one have now grown up, and, we are pleased to say, are making a mark which is creditable to their early training; the exception (W. Lane) died five years ago.

SELECTING OUR ANCESTORS.

At the Royal College of Physicians on Monday, Dr. J. A. Omerod, delivering the Harveian oration, dealt with the question of "Heredity." Alcoholism and kindred habits, he said, were responsible for the transmission of disease, but it was also possible that similar influences not strictly nutritional might produce corresponding results. As to the point whether acquired diseases are transmissible to children, the lecturer described our heredity as "mongrel, patchwork, or mosaic." The average man could not hope to escape mediocrity unless he had been "very careful in the choice of his ancestors."

A DOCTOR ON SLEEP.

There is much interest in the remarks of M. Leucas-Championniere, of the French Academy of Medicine, who has just given his views to the French "Revue" on the subject of sleep. The problem of sleep is similar to that of food, in the sense that it refreshes all people; yet some require more than others. But the French doctor reminds us that, though its importance is so great, it has not been so thoroughly investigated as the subject of food. It is perhaps because it goes so much deeper, with dream-problems and such matters, whereas food is more or less a matter of mechanical stoking, as Huxley pointed out long ago.

THE HABIT OF HEALTH.
It is possible to form the habit of health. Children have it. If a healthy baby wants feeding, it cries till it gets fed: if it is uncomfortable, it cries until it is made comfortable. If its surroundings do not suit its habit of health and well-being, the baby protests to the utmost of its power and its lungs until some change is made in those surroundings. This is the habit of health. Every man and woman ought to cultivate it before all other habits.—"Woman Worker."

Over a thousand trees are to be planted in Hammersmith streets at a cost of £510 by unemployed labour.

Describing as "a fearful satire on parental authority" the Bill to make cigarette smoking under the age of sixteen an offence, the Rev. G. D. Nicholas, vicar of Clewer St. Stephen, Windsor, writing in his parish magazine, asks: "Is the man worthy of the sacred name of father who cannot say to his son 'You shall not smoke till you are 16'?"

We are informed that this is the last time the banner will appear with its present heraldic chargings. Next Feast it will be improved and made as far as possible to carry a history in brief of the social and religious progress of the parish. Evidently Painswick means to keep pace with the times and to furnish its quota to the "New Theology." As a beginning we are told that "The committee responsible for the present 'Spiritual Symbology' of the flag have decided to quarter it with the arms of Shepscombe—a galleys, sable on vert—and to re-blazon the existing charge of the dexter chief quarter—a dog rampant, argent on murrey—with the sub-charge of a tithe-pig, or on sable, and a barrel of beer, azure on sanguine."

AMERICAN TARIFF REVISION.

"The Times" New York correspondent enumerates various causes which indicate a growing public belief that something will be done towards reducing tariff duties. Of these, perhaps the most significant is an article contributed by Mr. Carnegie to the forthcoming number of the "Century Magazine," in which he expresses the opinion that most American industries are no longer in need of protection.

BILLS OF BIRDS.

What is the bill of a bird and what does it mean? I do not refer to the bill of a hawk, or a heron, or an owl, or an ostrich, but to that which is the abstract of all these and a thousand more. I hold, regardless of anatomy and physiology, that a bird is a higher being than a beast. No beast soars and sings to its sweetheart; no beast remains in lifelong partnership with the wife of its youth; no beast builds itself a summer-house and decks it with feathers and bright shells. A beast is a grovelling denizen of the earth; a bird is a free citizen of the air. And who can say that there is not a connection between this difference and other developments? The beast, thinking only of its appetites, has evolved a delicate nose, a discriminating palate, three kinds of teeth to cut, tear, and grind its food, salivary glands to moisten the same, and a perfected apparatus of digestion. The bird, occupied with thoughts of love and beauty, with "fields, or waves, or mountains" and "shapes of sky or plain," has made little advance in the art and instruments of good living. It swallows its food whole, scarcely knowing the taste of it, and a pair of forceps for picking it up, tipped and cased with horn, is the whole of its dining furniture. For the bill of a bird, primarily and essentially, is that and nothing else. In the chickens and the sparrows that come to steal their food, and the robin that looks on, and all the little dicky-birds, you may see it in its simplicity. The size and shape may vary, as a Canadian axe differs from a Scotch axe; some are short and stout and have a sharp edge for shelling seeds; some are longer and fine-pointed, for picking worms and caterpillars out of their hiding-places; some a little hooked at their points, and one, that of the crossbill, with points crossed for picking the small seeds out of fir-cones; but all are practically the same tool.—E. H. Aitken in "Strand Magazine."

WOMEN'S CRAZE FOR SUPERFICIAL INTELLECTUALITY.

There is a widespread idea, especially among women, that intellectual activity is measured by the number of things one is trying to do, and that brain power is a synonym for muscular energy. So says "The Girl's Own Paper." The unfortunate woman who had "joined" fourteen clubs in moments of absent-mindedness doubtless counted herself a person of uncommon mental gifts, and was so regarded by her less discerning neighbours. The fact that she was always going to or coming from meetings, that committees were always sitting in her library, and that she swept with triumphant feet from Western science to Oriental mysticism, and conversed fluently on Parisian modes and Venetian art, was accepted as conclusive evidence of her superior intellectuality. Such half-educated women are the victims of an epoch of world-wide interests and concentrated mental energy, which bears the strong and clear-headed on to great gains of knowledge and to notable achievement in many fields, but intoxicates those who are sensitive rather than sane and well-poised. A great many good women are rushing breathlessly from science to art, from art to literature, and from literature to politics, under the impression that they are intensely intellectual when, as a matter of fact, they are abnormally nervous. They are driven through the world of knowledge by nervous restlessness, not by intellectual interest. With the best possible intentions they make their lives as barren of the fruits of thought as a desert country perpetually swept by tireless and wearisome winds, without rest and always in haste. They exhaust themselves and their friends, and find themselves at the end of their energetic travelling where they were at the beginning. Instead of being intellectual leaders they are semi-nervous invalids.

CAN PLANTS SEE?

Mr. Francis Darwin's recent exemplification of the resemblances between the actions of plants and the lower forms of animal life has not unnaturally been followed by the ascription to plants of many attributes of sensitiveness, such as feeling, and seeing, and consciousness. Plants in a limited sense certainly "see." Some of their skin cells may be rightly compared to little greenhouses with convex skylight roofs and reflecting floors. The convex roof focuses the light on the portion of the floor where the light energy will do most work in setting the food-mills of the plant into motion. The walls of this greenhouse are lined with a sensitive layer; and if the skylight roof gets a little out of focus, so that the light falls on these walls, then a signal is sent by them to some distant shifting mechanisms which turn the leaf a little so as to bring the roof back into proper focus again. It will be readily seen that these adjustments imply an extreme sensitiveness to light. The exactness with which a plant can measure intensity of illumination is so great that if a small rapidly growing shoot, such as that of a young mustard, is placed in the dark for a few hours and then two standard candles are placed on opposite sides, the leaves will feel the unequal stimulation when one candle is an inch nearer than the other, and the shoot will begin to curve toward it as toward a window. It has been found that some plants can appreciate a difference as small as one three-hundred thousandth of the intensity of a candle at the distance of a yard. It is needless to say that such delicacy of reaction is far beyond the capacity of the unaided human eye. Nor is the sensitiveness of the shoot confined to an appreciation of intensity, for a marked power of distinguishing colours is shown and the plant responds differently to various portions of the spectrum. The blue and the red do not excite the plant alike, as it bends towards the source of the first and is indifferent to the second.
