PREHISTORIC MONSTERS.

Two new dinosaurs have been discovered in the fossil beds of Montana by an expedition of the American Museum of Natural History led by Barnum Brown, of the Department of Vertebrate Paleontology. This discovery gives to the museum the distinction of naming two prehistoric monsters. Two expeditions were sent out early last summer under the direction of the head of the department, Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn, who is also the president of the museum. The first, which was under the charge of Mr. Walter Granger, went to the Wind River Basin, in Wyoming, where its most important find was a skull of the coryphodon, a creature which somewhat resembles the hippopotamus of the present day. This expedition also found some 500 smaller specimens, which are of great value in filling in connecting links in the chain of evolution. The expedition of Mr. Brown, which went to the Laramie formation, resulted in the unearthing of the fossil skeletons of a new reptile of the ceratopsian variety and of one of the Pre-dentata family hitherto unknown to scientists. The Ceratopsian specimen, whose classic name translated means "horn face," is a dinosaur, and is closely allied to the Triceratops, of which there is a complete skeleton in the museum.

HOW FAR CAN WE SEE?

What is the farthest limit to which the human vision can reach? Power in his book, "The eye and sight," gives the ability to see the star Alcor, situated at the tail of the Great Bear, as the test. Indeed, the Arabs call it the Test Star. It is most exceptional to be able to see Jupiter's satellites with the naked eye, though one or two cases are recorded, the third satellite being the most distinct. Peruvians are said to be the longest-sighted race on earth. Humboldt records a case where these Indians perceived a human figure eighteen miles away, being able to recognise that it was human and clad in white. This is probably the record for far sight.—"Strand Magazine."

BANKRUPT WITH £110,000 SURPLUS.

At London Bankruptcy Court on Wednesday, the public examination was concluded of Isidore Wyler, a merchant, of London, upon accounts showing liabilities £151,115 with assets returning a surplus of £110,346. Debtor brought an action in connection with the Nyassa Company and recovered judgment for £65,472 with costs, but on appeal the judgment was reversed. An appeal to the House of Lords is still pending.

IS PHOTOGRAPHY AN ART?

Photography is an art, because it represents facts and can select them. Where it falls short of art is in its lack of invention, and its dependence for beauty upon the beauty of the facts represented. When, granting these canons, photography fails adequately to represent beauty, it fails owing to the unskilfulness of the artist, because he does not understand the arrangement and juxtaposition of light-values, because he cannot select, because he cannot eliminate. Why, too, should it be denied that his photograph of beauty, whether of landscape or of flesh, should not be "the result of the successful expression of the artist's emotions"? A beautiful woman beautifully rendered is a work of beauty and a work of art.—"Strand Magazine."

Numbers 4 and 5 of photographs of Birdlip Children in last week's issue of the "Graphic" represented Morris Dancers, trained by Miss Helen Tuttielt, M.N.S.P.E.

INK THE ROMANS USED.

The ancient Romans commonly wrote with a metal point (stylius) on wooden tablets covered with wax (tabulae), but permanent records were written on parchment with a reed pen and liquid pigment, or ink. At Haltem in Westphalia, near the site of the Aluso fortress erected by Drusus in the year 11 B.C., was recently found (says the "Scientific American") a bronze vessel containing a dried black mass, which Professor Kassner has decided to be Roman ink. The mass was found to consist chiefly of soot and tannate of iron. It also contained smaller quantities of terri-oxide, clay, magnesia, gypsum, phosphoric acid, carbonic acid, alkalies, and sand. These ingredients probably represent chiefly accidental impurities, which have found their way into the old ink-stand, but some of them may be due to the chemical action of the ink on the bronze vessel. The presence of an aromatic substance suggests that the ink was imported from Italy, where the use of perfumed ink was common.

ROMANCE IN THE AUCTION ROOM.

Although buying and selling of one kind or another is responsible for many a romance, yet one does not often hear stories of auction-room incidents. The mere selling, it is true, of so many bricks and mortar, so many tons of machinery, so many sheep or horses, or so many acres of land, looks on the face of it a prosaic enough affair; but in these matters, as in everything else, there are almost always wheels within wheels and undercurrents of hidden feeling which may lead to all manner of unexpected denouements.

The auctioneer seated at his desk has countless opportunities of studying human nature which are never given to other men, and at some time or other each and all of them are brought face to face with incidents of an unusual kind. Even bricks and mortar, though they represent nothing more than their actual face value to one man, may be rich in valuable association to another; while land, horses, jewels, and articles of virtu vary from time to time so enormously in their intrinsic value that excitement is bound to rule high when those who covet them endeavour to become their possessors.—"Strand Magazine."

Captain Charles Edward Madden has been appointed Fourth Sea Lord of the Admiralty in succession to Vice-Admiral Sir A. L. Winsloe.

TELEGRAPHIC MESSENGERS.

At the jubilee meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce the following resolution will be proposed by the London Chamber of Commerce: "That the employment of boys as telegraphic messengers by the Government, during which time they receive small wages without learning any useful industry, together with the fact of their dismissal from Government employment as soon as they require men's wages, is most detrimental to the boys and the nation, as in this way thousands of boys drift into the ranks of the unemployed and are unfitted for industrial work, and after a time become unemployable."

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

According to a Press agency, Mr. Winston Churchill has promised to support the Daylight Saving Bill on the lines proposed by Mr. William Willett, should the measure be introduced in the next session of Parliament. Mr. Willett is in communication with several members of Parliament, from whom one will be selected to introduce the measure. Though the scheme has for some months been deprived somewhat of its prominence in public discussion, Mr. Willett has lectured upon the subject in various parts of the country, and has added considerably to the number of his supporters. He has just received news from Australia, in the form of a report by the Select Committee appointed by the Government of Victoria to inquire into the scheme. A Daylight Saving Bill was introduced at Melbourne in July last, and was read a second time in August. The Committee examined sixty-two witnesses, and the evidence obtained from representative men is almost unanimously in favour of the Bill. The Committee recommends that the clock be advanced one hour on the first Sunday in October, and put back one hour on the first Sunday in March of each year. They also recommend that the Government should communicate with the Governments of New South Wales and South Australia, with a view to a similar measure being introduced simultaneously in all three States. The Committee think the advantages of the Bill would be so great that it should be put into operation, even if the other States do not agree to the proposal.

THE DAYLIGHT COMET.

The new daylight comet, which it is conjectured has never been within the range of vision of the earth before, is rapidly receding from the sun. It was observed on Tuesday that it had apparently changed its course, having exchanged its former north-westerly direction for a south-westerly one.

At the Royal Victoria Hall in London on Tuesday night, Mr. W. F. Rolston delivered an interesting address on "Halley's Comet," with lantern views. The new comet discovered last week at Johannesburg had, he said, rather eclipsed Halley's comet, but the new comet might only be regarded as a week-ender, whereas Halley's comet would have to be reckoned with for months to come. There had been some weird predictions as to what might happen when Halley's comet passed between the earth and the sun, but we need expect nothing more serious than a possible flight of shooting stars from the comet's tail, although seeing that the comet had been whirling about and undergoing strange vicissitudes since, at all events, the year 1066, it had probably lost some of its luminous power. He hoped, however, in spite of this that it would be visible to the naked eye. Referring to Halley's remarkable discovery of the fact that the comet was visible about every seventy-five years, he said everyone felt proud that Halley was an Englishman.
