ONE MOULD FOR MANY MINDS.
 DISREGARD OF INDIVIDUALITY.

Presiding at the conference of London County Council teachers at the Birkbeck College on Saturday, Sir Alfred Keogh, K.C.B., Rector of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, criticised a feature of modern teaching.

The average standard of education could not be settled by the average intellect, he said. To his mind that was the point on which the teachers failed, and he held strongly that there was too much moulding of youths after on model. It had been said, and was still said, that they in England were losing their individuality and their power of initiative, and his own experience was distinctly in that direction. There was in his opinion too great a tendency in the administration of our affairs by the formation of committees and the delegation of responsibility to bodies rather than to individuals. That was a feature which was entirely un-English and much more Continental.

SIX MILLION CHILDREN AT SCHOOL.

A White Paper was issued on Tuesday showing the number of boys and girls on the admission registers of public elementary schools in England and Wales on October 1 of the years 1907 and 1908 respectively.

The grand total for 1908 was 6,079,138. Of these, 8 boys and 37 girls were seventeen years of age or more, while there were 80,277 boys and 76,088 girls at school between the ages of three and four.

BOYS' PERILOUS ADVENTURE.

An adventure at sea in which they narrowly escaped disaster befell two Dover lads who, fired by stories of large sums being made by the boatmen who are salvaging cargo from the wrecked ship Preussen, sailed off for the wreck. As the lads did not return a search was made along the coast by coastguards and Customs officers, but without result, and subsequently when their boat was found stove in and full of water it was feared they had been drowned. On Monday, however, the lads turned up footsore and hungry. They had lost sight of the Preussen in a fog that came up, and their boat had been driven by the strong flood tide on to the rocks under the eastern cliffs. They succeeded in swimming ashore, but owing to fog they had no idea as to where they were, and could find no way up the cliffs, at the foot of which they remained until daylight.

THE EASTWARD POSITION.

An extraordinary dispute has arisen at Christ Church, Wellington, Salop, between members of the choir and the new vicar (Rev. F. W. Argyle). The vicar discussed with the choir and the choirmaster, who has held that position thirty-two years, certain changes which he desired to make in the church service. Eventually the vicar conceded all points but that of the choir turning to the east during the recital of the Apostles' Creed. At the morning service on Sunday the members of the choir, with two exceptions, disrobed in the vestry and took up their position among the congregation. At the evening service the vicar announced that there was not a line in the Prayer-book authorising the turning to the east, which was, he said, an old pagan custom and a relic of sun worship. It was a ceremony without any definite spiritual significance or benefit.

"The neglect of the German language in English schools is a very grave national danger," said Professor Breul (Cambridge) to the Modern Languages Association on Tuesday.

Control of Highways.

ADJUSTMENT OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE RIGHTS.

At the Surveyors' Institution, Mr E. H. Blake on Monday evening, speaking of the control of highways, said that the Highways Acts were badly in need of consolidation. Persons laying out new streets should take all precautions for the public safety as might be directed by the local authority, who might, in default, do what was necessary and recover the cost. In regard to the making-up of private streets, local authorities would appear to have a dangerous power in the "benefit derived" principle. In a case at Skipton, the Court of Summary Jurisdiction allowed four-fifths of the expenses of making up a street to be apportioned over owners of houses fronting streets which had already been made up, and which led into the street in question, a decision which did not appear to have been appealed against. The liability to repair might be upon either the local authority or the private owner, the former being responsible if it had taken the highway over, or otherwise been made liable by statute. In the case of highways laid out before the passing of the Highways Act, 1835, the local authority was liable to repair, the mere throwing open unreservedly to the public and the user by the public being sufficient to produce such liability.

Mr. Blake added that it was necessary to keep fences adjoining highways in a safe condition. Where a child stood on a fence which was rotten, and which fell on him and hurt him, the Court of Appeal held that the defective fence was a nuisance and caused the injuries, and that the defendant was liable. Generally speaking, any person had a common law right to remove obstructions to a highway, but he must show his necessity for travelling over the part obstructed.

In a few weeks from now London may expect to see some of the new George V. coinage.

There were 2,246 births and 1,328 deaths in London last week, respectively 489 and 364 below the average for the corresponding weeks in the previous five years. The highest death rate was 21 per 1,000 in Swansea, compared with 14.1 in London.

The Prince of Wales.

PLANS FOR HIS FUTURE CAREER.

In April next the Prince of Wales will complete his course of training in the Senior Division of the Royal Naval Training College at Dartmouth, and the first phase in his education for the exalted office he will one day be called upon to fill will come to an end. So soon as he leaves Dartmoor the Prince will commence to read for a short University career. His name will be put down for one of the Colleges at Oxford, probably Christ Church, and he will enter there in the autumn after the summer vacation. He will only remain at the University for two years, however, but while he is in residence at Oxford he will be subject to the same routine and discipline as any other undergraduate. When his University course is at an end the Prince of Wales will set off on a tour of the British Empire, accompanied by his brother, Prince Albert. The precedent of the similar tour in the Bacchante enjoyed by King George and his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, in the early eighties will be closely followed, and it is estimated that nearly twelve months will be spent in thus going round the world.

On the return from the tour, in obedience to precedent, which lays it down that the Heir-Apparent to the British Throne shall be closely identified to the Army, the Prince of Wales will be gazetted to a cavalry regiment, and his active connection with the naval service will terminate. He will not go through the preliminary training at Sandhurst, however, but his life in the Army will be that of any other subaltern. In due course he will be made acquainted with the duties of the other branches of the Army, such as the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers.

His Royal Highness will be present next month at the State opening of Parliament by the King and Queen, but his role will be that of a spectator, for it is the King's desire that he shall not undertake any public duties, with the exception of the investiture at Carnarvon, until he has attained the age of eighteen, when Royalty legally comes of age in this country.

Decline of Free Churches.

OPINIONS OF LEADERS ON CONTRIBUTORY CAUSES.

In recent years the Baptists, Congregationalists, and Wesleyan Methodists have reported a decrease of membership, and the Baptist and Congregational statistics for the year just closed reveal a diminution of 3,775 and 1,587 respectively. In this week's "Christian Commonwealth" Free Church leaders discuss the situation. Among the opinions are the following:—

Sir R. W. Perks, a leading Wesleyan Methodist layman.—To attempt to reconcile the ideas of the Gospel preacher with the pulpit politician would be an impossible task. The only serious troubles we as a Church suffer from are: (1) A feeble type of preacher who reads his sermons and who has either not enough courage or brains to preach the Gospel; and (2) a curious modern development, mainly among our professional class, called the "Sociologist."

The Rev. George Hooper, president of the Metropolitan Free Church Federation.—There is too much talk and too little real work going on in the churches.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, M.P.—There is today too decided a tendency to over-elaborate the machinery of the Church and to spend upon meetings and conferences time and energy that could be much more profitably employed.

The Rev. W. B. Lark, ex-president of the United Methodist Church.—The Churches are doubtless passing through a crisis, and the cause or causes of their failure to impress the masses must be looked for inside rather than outside the Churches.

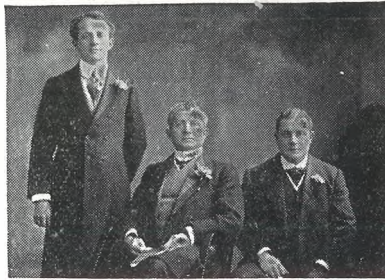

Principal Griffith Jones, the United College, Bradford.—There is more real Christianity in the land than ever there was.

Professor A. S. Peake, Victoria University, Manchester.—Good would come from a frank, brotherly, and courageous discussion by those who are equipped with knowledge, insight, and the gift of taking long and comprehensive views.

The Rev. A. T. Guttery, missionary secretary of the Primitive Methodist Conference.—The proposal to hold an inter-denominational conference is one of great importance, but such a congress must not degenerate into a theological wrangle. It must avoid recrimination, but in holy comradeship it should face the problems of our modern life,

REV. H. S. BARNES, M.A.,
the newly-appointed curate-in-charge of Emmanuel Church, Cheltenham, to welcome whom a social gathering was held at Emmanuel, January 9, 1911.

ERA OF STEAM PASSING AWAY.

"DREADNOUGHTS" MAY GO TO THE SCRAP HEAP.

SUBMARINES v. MINES.

Extraordinary and impressive statements on changes in Naval armaments are contained in Dr. Dillon's review of foreign affairs which appears in the January number of the "Contemporary Review." This able and experienced publicist holds that progress in aviation and improvements in submarines may go far to reduce the value of Dreadnoughts.

Another revolutionary change is the application to marine engines of the principle of propulsion by internal combustion. According to Dr. Dillon the time is fast approaching when the present marine engines will be superseded by engines similar to those by which motor-cars and submarines are driven. Already medium-sized ships are being driven successfully by internal combustion engines. This change in the type of engines effects a saving of 75 per cent. in fuel and 25 per cent. in the carrying capacity of the ships. Dr. Dillon writes:—

In the near future steamships will disappear, and motor-driven vessels will take their place. In lieu of the 300 stokers of to-day a modest staff of from 12 to 20 men will be ample. Coaling stations, for which the great Powers have been craving and intriguing, will be unnecessary, and that source of expense and anxiety will vanish.

Again, warships, instead of being tethered, as it were, and confined to a radius of a thousand miles from their base, will be free to traverse the world, replenishing their oil-reservoirs whenever they come across any of the innumerable tank steamers which are to be met with on all ocean highways. Moreover, ships will be able to replenish their stores of liquid fuel under difficulties which would to-day be prohibitive, as in a gale of wind, for example. This would mean an enormous increase of the mobility of the fighting fleets of the world, and the loss of England's special advantage in the possession of coaling stations.

The new motor engines, I am told, cannot be fitted to ships built on the old lines. Therefore all our Dreadnoughts, our cruisers, and our ocean greyhounds will have to go to the scrap heap. To this there is no alternative. As soon as this contingency, which may shortly be confronted, is recognised by all the Powers interested, then the psychological moment will have come for discussing whether the race for naval construction is to begin all over again, or some ratio of the amount to be expended each year can be agreed upon by the naval Powers. Then, and only then, would President Taft's suggestion find favour in the eyes of the majority of the nations and bear desirable fruit.

Another remarkable feature of present-day naval construction is the development of the submarine. Here the United Kingdom is easily pre-eminent. The latest types of British submarines can cruise for 2,000 miles without returning to port. What is more, these vessels are immune from danger from submarine mines. The sowing of the sea with mines is a deadly menace to sea-going craft. But submarine vessels, with their rounded nose, can come into contact with a mine without suffering any inconvenience, for a mine needs to be struck sharply by a heavy body in order to explode.

Dr. Dillon emphasises the importance of the submarine for defensive purposes. "A flotilla of submarines, such as those which are stationed along the whole of the coast from Dover to Dundee, would render it absolutely impossible for any hostile army, even if the British sea-going fleet were at the bottom of the sea, to effect a landing on our shores." No conceivable convoy, it is affirmed, would be of the least avail in saving the huddled transports from sudden destruction by an invisible foe.

THE SCHOOL CAP.

The influence of the school cap in educating children in citizenship was the theme of Mr. J. L. Paton, high master of the Manchester Grammar School, at the North of England Education Conference, Liverpool, on Saturday. What did the school cap mean? he asked. To the boy it was what the Union Jack was to the soldier. It was a rallying point. It made him feel that he belonged to a community to which he had duties and obligations.

"I think," continued Mr. Paton, "that the school cap means even more to the girl." If they retained the common sailor hat and hat-band that were worn alike by all the scholars, they would shut the door against the spirit of snobbery, which he ventured to think was never part of the original sin of the child.

He expressed his dislike of the differentiation of the school cap in the case of boys who had won free places in the school.

"ONE-STEP" COMPETITION.

At the weekly dance of the Royalist Club, held on Monday night in London, the special feature was the "One-Step" competition, the first prize being a cheque for £10 and the second a cheque for half that amount. The "One-Step" is a recently-introduced dance in fast "Two-Step" time, and may be described as consisting of a rhythmical glide. Twenty-eight couples entered, and a keen contest was decided by the votes of the spectators.

LUCID PRONOUNCEMENT ON SMOKING.

Smoking just before meals is to be deprecated (says a lucid writer in the "Lancet"), because the pungency of the pyroigneous products contained in tobacco smoke renders the buccal mucosa insensitive to alimentary stimulation—in fact, their effect is to dull or abolish the olfactogustatory reflex, thus depriving us of what Pawlow calls "appetite juice."
