WHEN PRINCES GO A-WOOING.

In the annals of Royal love-making there are few prettier stories than that which tells how the German Emperor won (to quote his own words) "the jewel that sparkles by his side." When, more than thirty years ago, the youthful Prince Wilhelm left Berlin for a few days' shooting as the guest of Duke Friedrich of Schleswig-Holstein, the little dreamt, we may be sure, that he was making the most important journey of his life. The moment the castle came in sight, with boylike impatience, he left his carriage to take a "short cut" across the park; but he had not proceeded far before his steps were stayed at sight of a young lady swinging dreamily in a hammock, the book she had evidently been reading lying open in her lap.

It was an idyllic picture, which might well have arrested the steps of a much less romantic young man. Under the somewhat flimsy pretext of enquiring his way, the Prince advanced to the young lady and exchanged a few pleasant words with her before continuing his journey. An hour later he was laughingly making his formal bow on introduction to the blushing Princess Augusta Victoria, whose siesta he had disturbed. Idyllic weeks followed, when, with the beautiful Princess by his side, he forgot, in many a blissful ramble, that there was such a weapon as a gun; and when at last he returned to Berlin it was to announce to his parents that he had left his heart behind in the Castle of Prinkenanau.

The wooing of the present Emperor of Austria was no less romantic and "quick in the doing." When, nearly sixty years ago, Francis Joseph was spending his twenty-third birthday with his mother, the Archduchess Sophia, she decided to give a ball in honour of the anniversary; and among the invited guests were the Duchess of Bavaria and her two beautiful daughters, Hélène and Elizabeth. The Duchess accepted the invitation for herself and elder daughter, Hélène, but regretted that Elizabeth would be unable to come as she had not yet made her debut, and moreover had no dress suitable to such an occasion. "But she must come," exclaimed the young Emperor imperiously; "let her wear the simplest dress and a rose in her hair, and we will make her 'Queen of the Ball.'"

To such a command there could be no refusal.

Attired in a simple muslin dress, with a red rose nestling in her glorious hair, the Princess Elizabeth dazzled all eyes by the radiance of her girlish beauty, and so effectually captured the Emperor's heart that he would dance with no other lady, however fair. Long before the last strains of music died away, he took his lovely partner to an adjacent room, and, opening an album full of pictures of Austrian costumes, said, "All these are my subjects. Will you not help me to reign over them?" The Princess, with downcast head and quivering lips, placed her hand timidly in the strong, ardent grasp of her lover, and the sweet compact was sealed.—"The Weekly Telegraph."

ROUND THE WORLD WITH ROYALTY.

The £120,000 that has been voted by Parliament to help King George on his trip to India will not pay his expenses or anything like them. Tours through India are costly affairs in any case, but as King George is visiting his subjects there as Emperor of India, the money which will be spent one way and another will be simply enormous. Even the cost of the recent trip of the Crown Prince of Germany to the Far East ran into five figures, although he was travelling quietly, and more to gain an insight of the country than for any other reason. Yet the Kaiser had to pay £15,000 for his son's bare travelling expenses.

When the late King Edward toured India in 1875, Parliament voted £112,000, not without strenuous opposition. It was quite an innovation at the time, and many people thought that the money would be wasted. But the tour of the Prince of Wales, as he was then, proved so popular that it has been imitated over and over again. On his way to India he visited Athens and afterwards Cairo, where his brief stay seemed like a page out of the "Arabian Nights." When in India everyone from the lowest peasant to the highest native prince bent the knee before him. In every way the native princes, themselves worth far more than any King of England, tried to make the Prince of Wales realise that he would indeed one day be their ruler. The Nizam of Hyderabad, for example, expressed a desire to be allowed to groom the Prince's horse personally, a request that was, naturally, refused. A sword, literally studded with the finest stones of the East, and worth £12,000, was presented to the Prince by the Maharajah of Lahore.

When the Prince arrived at Benares, an aged and wealthy chief presented him with a huge bale of the costliest shawls and cloth-of-gold embroideries, unpacking and displaying the present with his own hands, though he had over a hundred attendants following him. Not satisfied, however, with what he had given the royal visitor, he handed him his own walking stick, a gold-plated affair, heavily encrusted with gems. The Maharajah of Cashmere constructed a road, thirty miles in length, leading to his capital on the occasion of the royal visit. The Gaekwar of Baroda provided a special guard of honour of fifteen hundred native troops, dressed in Highland costume! The tour cost £20,000, in addition to the £112,000 allotted by Parliament. Though this was a large sum, it was amply justified by the important political results which have since followed.—"The Weekly Telegraph."

THE MAKING OF A GENTLEWOMAN.

Have you ever thought that the distinctive features of a well-bred woman are for the most part things that can be had for nothing, things that money cannot buy? Here are a few! A quiet, calm, and dignified manner; a well-modulated voice; a fastidious attention to cleanliness in her person, her apparel, and her surroundings; a care for suitability in dress; a tactful and unselfish consideration for others; a self-restraint and self-control; an absence of affectation and boastfulness and vulgarity in conversation; a subordination of personal wishes; a certain reticence about ailments and personal affairs; a mind so disciplined that it is equal to any emergency; and, above all, a belief in God. These are among the qualities that come to one's mind when one thinks of a well-bred woman. But they have little to do with the size of her income. If you doubt this, run through some of the things that women spend their money upon, and see how far any of them can aid in the formation of a fine character.—"Girl's Own Paper and Woman's Magazine."

WHEN IT IS DARK.

Everyone knows how dangerous it is to strike matches when in bed—yet no one relishes turning out these cold mornings to ascertain the time. The Radium Clock shown in the picture tells the time in light or darkness, without the aid of battery or any artificial light.

This Clock never loses its wonderful glow, because Radium always retains its power. As a Bedroom or Travelling Clock, with or without an Alarm, it forms a most inexpensive gift, and is a source of comfort only realised when in use.

All particulars will be gladly furnished by Messrs. Waite and Sons, Jewellers, Cheltenham.

HORSEMANSHIP WITHOUT BRIDLE.

Visitors in the Bois de Boulogne can see almost any morning a horse walking, trotting, or galloping without the use of a bridle. The owner, M. E. Hayrn, has so trained the horse (says the Paris "Excelsior") that it follows his guidance by use of his knees or a strap passed round its neck. The animal is Irish bred, nine years old, and took a prominent part in the recent "raid hippique" organised by the "Matin."

"Do you live on the premises?" asked the magistrate of a witness at Bow-street. "Partly," was the reply. The Magistrate: "Well, where does the other part live?" "Call him an equilateral triangle," said the magistrate at Greenwich to a man charged with using bad language. "I will, sir," he replied seriously.

Pretending to be a window cleaner, a man has succeeded in stealing jewellery valued at over £800 from the house of Mr. James Macalister, of Hampstead.

THE ROOK REPUBLIC.

The rook is almost as well known as the sparrow. It is a marvel to some stern utilitarians why both birds are allowed to exist in such enormous numbers. No picture of the country is complete without a few rooks somewhere in the horizon. Even prosaic people who care nothing for rural landscapes do not disdain rook pie!

And yet there is a tremendous amount of ignorance as to these birds and their habits. In the first place, it is quite a common thing to hear them spoken of as crows. True, the rook, in common with the raven, the jackdaw, magpie, the grey crow, the hooded crow, and the carrion, all belong to the family "corvus"; yet if the rook and the crow are first cousins, they have each very distinct characteristics of their own. Asked to distinguish the one from the other, a youthful observer once explained that "when it's one it's a crow, when it's a lot it's a rook." Grammatically the definition is open to criticism, yet it is not altogether wrong for all that.

Crows are solitary birds. Occasionally it is true, parties of them may be seen, yet only very small parties—they never fly in flocks. Rooks, on the other hand, are strictly gregarious, and during the autumn and winter months they may be seen in vast herds no man can attempt to number.

For such multitudes to nest in the same locality would be inconvenient, if not impossible; during the nesting season a change comes over the habits of the rooks. Early in the year the great family breaks up into a number of smaller groups, and each little band goes off to its own nesting-place.—"The Weekly Telegraph."

THE REV. H. CARNEGIE KNOX,
Of Widcombe Vicarage, Bath, vicar-designate of St. James's, Cheltenham.

FEEDING TIME AT THE ZOO.

The little penguins look out of the water awkward, inept, and altogether foolish. Yet in the water they are itasnes of light. They can beat a fish in its own element. Their movements are grace, celerity, and precision personified. The best hare that ever eluded the hounds never doubled with a tithe of their speed. The best hound that ever won the Waterloo Cup never picked up its prey with half the address. Before these two penguins had been in the tank a quarter of a minute by my watch, they had captured and devoured, between them, every fish in the tank.

Every fish, did I say? On this occasion it ought to have been "every fish but one. One little member of the many tribe had squeezed itself between the frame and the glass, and the keen eyed and incredibly swift penguins missed him!" "Ha," we thought, as we gazed sympathetically at the little chap cowering into his corner, "he is relieved until to-morrow. His execution is postponed, but we were wrong. It was our ignorance which gave him this respite. We were not aware that this was only the first turn and that the cormorants had still to give their exhibition of aquatic gymnastics.

In response to the whistle from the keeper, the penguins popped through their trap-door and were again in their cage. Then came more little fishes and more darting to and fro. Then the other trap-door was opened, and the torpedo practice commenced. But with a difference. I do not remember to have seen the penguins go to the surface of the water either to breathe or to eat their fish during all their feeding operations. But the cormorants, on the contrary, went to the surface to eat each fish they caught. Yet, though they were handicapped, as against the penguins, by this necessity, they only occupied a few seconds longer than their rivals in accomplishing the gastronomic feat of catching and bolting thirty eminently lively minnows. It must be said on peasant that the little chap who hid away in the cranny of the frame was one of their earliest victims I watch him especially, and witnessed his interment.

The swimming of the cormorants is not only speedy but eagerness personified. As compared with the penguins they are singularly pretty, having long serpentine necks, swan-like in their grace. These they shoot out in the form of a shallow interrogation mark level with their bodies and legs, when they are pursuing their prey, and the effect is one of singular grace and intense eagerness. The speed with which they seize their prey, shoot to the surface, execute the bolting movement, and dive again, must be seen to be believed.—"The Weekly Telegraph."

HORSE V. MOTOR FOR DOCTORS.

Referring to the unanimity with which medical men have expressed themselves in "The Autocar" as being favourable to the motor in preference to the horse for use in connection with their professional duties, another medical practitioner writes as follows in derance of the horse: The majority of doctors do not understand horses, hence their preference for the motor-car. I understand the former and not the latter, and hence my preference for horses. But when a number of men compare the cost of the two, to the marked disadvantage of the horse, I feel I must come to the rescue of the horse. Until quite recently I usually kept three and four and sometimes five horses. Practising in the country I needed perhaps two or three, but I generally exceeded that number by two. I did my round, put in one or two days' hunting a week, used one for attending camp (being a Territorial officer), and had the pleasure of riding and driving at all times on their keep. Of course, I bought young ones, and had the pleasure of training them. No motor-car has ever yet brought about such a satisfactory condition of things from a financial point of view. Next, I enjoyed the riding and driving of these animals—an enjoyment I take it, which could not be found in riding in the costliest motor.

MR. WILLIAM FRASER McDONELL,
Of Hewlett Cottage, Cheltenham, who died Dec. 5, 1911, after an operation for appendicitis, aged 52 years. He was a son of the late Mr. Fraser McDonell, of Pittville House, Cheltenham, the first civilian awarded the V.C. for heroism during the Indian Mutiny. Mr. William McDonell was one of the first to enlist in the Imperial Yeomanry for active service in South Africa, and went right through the war with Lord Methuen's forces. He married a sister of Mr. A. Clifford, of Chestal, Dursley, who survives him.

JAPAN'S RICE CROP.

Consular advices from Yokohama state that the total production of rice in Japan in 1910 was estimated at a little over 233,000,000 bushels, according to the investigations made by the Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The figures for the two preceding years were 250,000,000 bushels in 1908 and 262,000,000 bushels in 1909. The estimated crop for 1910 showed a falling off of over 7 per cent, compared with the average annual crop for the past seven years. This estimate was regarded by many as being altogether too optimistic, and it was claimed that the actual crop was far below the estimate. Owing to the unprecedented high price of rice, the question of securing a portion of foodstuff of this kind from the United States has been seriously considered. The report adds that the Imperial Japanese Minister of Agriculture and Commerce suspended August and September delivery sales of rice on the exchange. The reason assigned for this extreme measure on the part of the Minister was the order was delivered direct to the exchange, instead of passing through the familiar channel—the Governor or Mayor of the place—causing the gradual rise in the price had become injurious to the public interest, as nothing works more hardship on people in Japan than the high cost of rice. The principal foodstuff. The Minister is empowered by law either to dissolve or suspend sales on the exchange when deemed necessary or advisable for public welfare.

THE OLD WAY—OR THE NEW & SAFE WAY.

Is it worth running the risk of catching cold, to say nothing of the danger of fire, when you can lie snugly in bed and see the time without moving a muscle? The clock shown in the "Safe Way" picture tells the time correctly in light or darkness without the aid of battery or night-light. This clock has been pronounced a boon by all who have it. You can have one on a fortnight's trial by sending to the Radium Clock agents, WAITE AND SON, Jewellers, Cheltenham.

NOTABLE EARLY ACHIEVEMENTS.

The spinning-mule which replaced Arkwright's spinning-jenny, and revolutionised the cotton trade, was the invention of a boy—Samuel Crompton, whose little cottage still stands in the neighbourhood of Bolton, and whose statue stands in the principal square of that busy cotton town. He was only sixteen years of age, and engaged in daily toil as a spinner, when he conceived the principle of his wonderful invention and began to work it out. But although he started thus early, and although the manufacturers of his day recognised the wonderful advance which his machine was upon its predecessors, yet Crompton was one of those unlucky inventors who make millions for other people and little or nothing for themselves. Though he died in comparative poverty, and though the Government made him a grudging grant of £500 in his old age, yet Samuel Crompton's invention has without doubt added millions upon millions sterling to the revenues of this country.

John Smeaton might almost be called the inventor of the lighthouse, seeing that he was the first man to build a lighthouse with such solidity and strength that it was almost as durable as the rock upon which it was erected. Yet he was a mere boy when he thought of the simple device which made his famous Eddystone Lighthouse withstand wind and waves and fire, when every other attempt had failed. He was a most inventive youth, and from his earliest boyhood was constantly devising new schemes, and even the great James Watt, himself a boy inventor, has left it on record that all later engineers owe to John Smeaton their deepest debt of gratitude, for he laid the foundation for them all. The device was to make one stone dovetail into another, and he used this method in building a wall when he was quite a youth.—"The Weekly Telegraph."

CHELTENHAM SOCIETY WEDDING.
 WINTERBOTHAM—SMITH.

The wedding of Mr. Reginald J. Winterbotham, elder son of the late Mr. John B. Winterbotham and Mrs. Winterbotham, of Glenmore, Pittville, Cheltenham, and the Hon. Mrs. Esther E. Smith, daughter of the Right Hon. Lord and Lady Kingsale, of The Grange, Cheltenham, took place at St. Paul's Church, Cheltenham, on November 30th, 1911. Owing to the severe illness of the bride's aunt (who has since died), the wedding was a very quiet one, although a great many friends and spectators attended the church.

1.—The bridegroom arriving at the church. 3.—The three children of the Hon. Mrs. 5.—The bride arriving with her father. 8.—Guests arriving at the church.
 2.—Ald. J. B. Winterbotham (uncle of the Smith arriving at the church. 6.—Lord Kingsale with Mrs. Winterbotham 9.—One of the sisters of the bride, who attended her. bridegroom) and Lady Kingsale (mother of the bride). 4.—Some of the clerical staff of Messrs. Winterbotham and Gurney, of which firm 7.—Sir Henry Winterbotham arriving at the 10.—Bride and bridegroom leaving church.

 CHELTENHAM.

The Home Secretary has notified the London County Council that the King has been pleased, on the application of Mr. R. Loveland-Loveland, late Deputy-Chairman of Quarter Sessions, to assign him a pension of £1,000 a year.

KEEP SMILING.

When you can eat a hearty breakfast and smile after yesterday's experience you are on the safe side, and in for success to-day.

PULVERISING A PROVERB.

A well-known publisher once declared at a dinner that when he was a printer he used to change his situation six or seven times a year. On one occasion a foreman said to him when he was leaving "Remember, my boy, 'a rolling stone gathers no moss.'" "Moss, sir," replied the young man, "is for ruins."

THE IMPORTANCE OF PUNCTUALITY.

Method is the very hinge of business, and there is no method without punctuality. Punctuality is important, because it subserves the peace and good temper of a family; the want of it not only infringes on necessary duty, but sometimes excludes that duty. The calmness of mind which it produces is another advantage of punctuality; a disorderly man is always in a hurry, he has no time to speak to you because he is going elsewhere, and when he gets there he is too late for his business, or he must hurry away to another before he finishes it. Punctuality gives weight to character. "Such a man has made an appointment, then I know he will keep it." And this generates punctuality in you. For like other virtues it propagates itself. Servants and children must be punctual where their leader is so. Appointments, indeed, become debts. I owe you punctuality if I have made an appointment with you, and have no right to throw away your time if I do my own.—The foregoing was many years ago affixed to the notice board in a London printing works.

London County Council will next year apply to Parliament for authority to reconstruct Lambeth Brigade, at an estimated cost of £220,000.

TRACK OF BIRD MIGRATION.
Some more remarkable "recoveries" have been made of ringed birds, and once again Portugal takes a prominent place. Two terns, first ringed in their nest, one in Ross-shire and one in Renfrewshire, have been reported this autumn, the first fifteen miles south of Oporto, the other near Aveiro, in Portugal.

These "recoveries" in Portugal are becoming so considerable that it may soon be possible to track out a regular line of migration along the coast and across Spain, parts of which are perhaps the best bird Paradise in the world. Quite a number of English ornithologists are now engaged in studying birds there and investigating migration.

TO THE DESPONDENT.

The following is from an American journal: If you don't like your job—get another. But the chances are many that you won't like the second one either. The reason you don't like your job may be in the job—that sometimes happens; but most of the men I have met who didn't like the job they had, couldn't like any job. The surest way to get out of a job that you don't like is to like it. The surest way to like a job is to make the most of it. I have never seen a job so simple that there was only one way to do it, and I have never seen any job so simple but that a lot of people were doing it the wrong way. But as soon as a man gets it through his head that there is a right way and a wrong way to every job, that man has taken the first step towards making his job interesting. Any job is interesting, any job is likeable, if it takes a little brains to do it. The mistake most men make is in assuming that brains are not needed, and in thus reducing an otherwise agreeable task to a monotonous and painful one.

NEW CRUELTY ACT.

In dealing with a case of alleged cruelty, Mr. Hedderwick, the North London magistrate, on Tuesday said he wished to draw public notice to the fact that on Jan. 1st next a new Act relating to cruelty to animals would come into force. Under that Act the maximum fine was raised to £25 and the summary imprisonment to six months, in place of the £5 fine and two months' imprisonment the magistrate now had power to impose.

THE LUSITANIA'S RECORD.

The arrival of the Cunard liner Lusitania at Fishguard on Monday night from New York marked another record in the history of the mercantile marine. Within the past twelve months the Cunard liner has crossed the Atlantic 32 times, or in other words, has completed no less than 16 round trips between England and America. During this period she maintained an average speed between Daunt's Rock and the Lightship at Ambrose Channel of 24.67 westward and 24.66 eastward.

- 2.—A boar stag, first prize for heaviest pig in market, weight 8wt. 3qrs. 2lbs., about 2½ years old. Bred by the Committee of Visitors of Gloucestershire Asylums. It fetched £9 7s. 6d.
- 3.—Mr. Pitman, a Cheltenham farmer, chatting to Mr. R. W. Dugdale, chief salesman for Messrs. Bruton, Knowles, and Co.
- 4.—Major Knowles selling pigs by auction.
- 5.—Out of his latitude. A Highland cow, of which there were a good number sold.
- 6.—Striking a bargain.
- 7.—First prize five heifers, belonging to Mr. Vines, Leonard Stanley.
- 8.—Inspecting a bargain.
- 9.—Looking at the Aberdeen Angus cattle.

A CHELTENHAM IMPROVEMENT.

MESSRS. JOHN LANCE AND CO.'S, LIMITED, FINE RANGE OF BUSINESS PREMISES.

As a shopping centre, Cheltenham justly holds a premier place in the West of England. For variety and choice displays of Drapery Goods of all kinds, in no town can the most fastidious have their individual tastes better catered for. Everything that is fashionable and useful is to be found in the well-appointed shops which grace our beautiful streets.

The latest additions to the attractions of the Garden Town are the beautiful plate-glass Island Windows lately completed by the old-established and popular firm of John Lance and Co. They are magnificent and unique, there being none of the same kind in the town or county. Residents and visitors can view with comfort and cover in wet weather the beautiful fancy and useful goods with which the windows are furnished.

A visit to this establishment will well repay an intending purchaser, and a survey of the display in the various windows will make a selection of Presents an easy matter. Articles will be found suiting all tastes at prices from a few pence upwards, and visitors to any department of the establishment will find able and willing assistants ready to attend to their smallest requirements.

We especially noticed in the inner windows of the corridors, among a beautiful and artistic collection of Fancy Articles for Christmas Presents, a series of Hand-painted and Lace Fans from 1s. 6½d. to 4s. 6d., and a series of dainty Silver-embroidered Handkerchiefs, with any initial, at 6½d.

A noticeable window is the Lace Window, which no lady with artistic tastes can pass without appreciation. Here we have a series of articles in made-up lace at all prices. Fichus, from 1s. 11½d. to 30s.; Yokes, 1s. 11½d. to 5s. 11d.; and Jabots, from 1s. 0½d. to 4s. 11d.

Passing to another of the corridor windows, we find it full of Wool Wraps of fleecy material and the most delicate shades, suitable for evening wear.

Then we turn to the beautiful island windows, one of which is filled with the requirements of Babyhood, from its first appearance until it is ready to be breeched, if a boy, or dressed more maturely if a girl.

In the other island window we find a collection of Winter Coats and Jackets for Ladies. We could not help noticing a brown cloth walking or driving coat at 21s. 6d. which would have been cheap at a much higher price. A fine series of Furs are also shown.

In the right-hand front window is a very fine collection of Embroidered Five-o'clock Tea-Cloths, Hand-drawn Towels, and Oxford and Print Dress Lengths, suitable for Christmas Presents.

In the Arcade, in which are a series of magnificent windows fully dressed, can be found an Extended Display of Useful and Ornamental Presents. Here we noticed windows of Ladies' Underclothing, Gentlemen's Department, a window of Blouse and Evening Dresses, and another of Towels of every description.

In the Blouse Window are some beautiful Silk Embroidered Blouses as low as 4s. 6d., and some really delightful Embroidered Art Blouse Lengths, in various colours, at 2s. 11d.—a ridiculous price. We also saw some Golfing Coats at very moderate prices, and some Woollen Dress Lengths at 4s. 11d. would make useful Christmas Presents.

On the other side of the Arcade is the Furnishing Department, in which is a splendid display of articles, both for general furnishing and suitable for Christmas Presents.

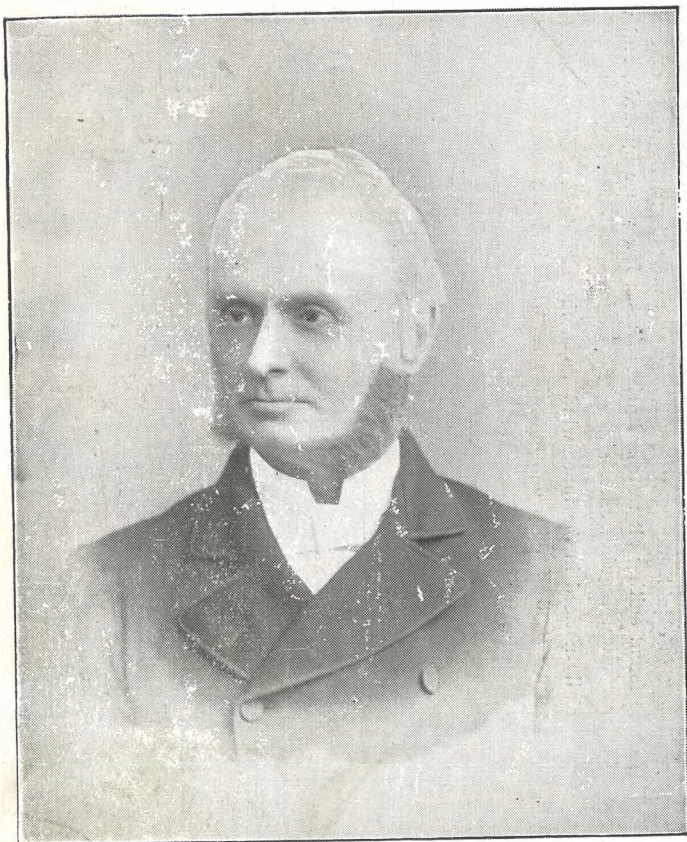

Taken altogether, it is a most notable show, and one that would be difficult to surpass in the Provinces.

PERILS INCURRED BY MIGRATING BIRDS.

The fascinating problem of "The Migration of Birds" is discussed in the "Windsor Magazine" with many interesting illustrations. Writing of the perils that beset these strange journeyings, the author says:—

"Many, too, are the perils that beset the journey, for falcons and hawks of various kinds are ever ready to take toll of the wanderers, whilst lighthouses frequently prove a fatal fascination. The attraction of the lighthouse or lightship is greatest on dark, cloudy nights, when the birds evidently lose their bearings and make for the light as being the only landmark. The scene on such a night has been described as bewildering. Hundreds of thousands of migrants are passing; the lamp is vignettted in a perfect sea of drifting birds. Some cling, fluttering like huge moths, to the lantern; dozens are killed by hurling themselves against the glass. Then, as the moon breaks through the clouds, and the migrating stream is able to find its bearings again, the lighthouse is deserted, and their wild call-notes alone tell us that the birds are still passing far overhead. Thus it is more or less due to weather conditions that we actually see anything of nocturnal flights. For should a spell of fine starlight nights occur at the appointed time, few, if any, birds will visit the lights, though their migration has taken place just the same.

"In most cases it is the young and inexperienced birds that seem perplexed at such adverse circumstances, the old hands, who have travelled before, being, apparently, not distressed by them. This is scarcely to be wondered at, when we know that the young of many species, soon after leaving the nest, are the first to start on the autumn journey south.

"For the youngsters, who have had no previous knowledge of the way, will set out to find Africa 'on their own.' Travelling some days in advance of their parents, these plucky fledglings journey hundreds of miles into the unknown, yet following almost unerringly an ancient bird-path which their ancestors have followed for ages."

PERILS OF A PRESIDENT.

The life of a president is one of peril and slavery even worse than that of a king. Look at poor Mr. Taft. He lately went through the ordeal of shaking hands with 5,426 persons in two and three-quarter hours, and when he had finished his own hands were so sore and swollen that he had to bathe them in liniment. —"Ideas."

Presentation to Bro. G. C. Pratley.

A PRESENTATION WAS MADE BY LOCAL FORESTERS ON MONDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1911, TO BRO. G. C. PRATLEY, SECRETARY FOR THE CHELTENHAM DISTRICT, IN CELEBRATION OF HIS GOLDEN WEDDING AND TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' SERVICE AS DISTRICT SECRETARY. IT TOOK THE FORM OF A VALUABLE SILVER TEA AND COFFEE SERVICE (MANUFACTURED BY MR. SIDNEY T. STEEL, THE PROMENADE) AND AN ILLUMINATED ADDRESS, EXECUTED BY MR. DRINKWATER.

Mr. C. Llewellyn Davies, a member of a London firm of solicitors, has been appointed solicitor to the Post-office jointly with Sir Robert Hunter, who will continue to act until the arrangements connected with the transfer of the telephones are completed.

More than £4,000,000 has been left for religious, educational, and charitable purposes under wills proved this year, ninety testators having bequeathed three and a half millions (or a quarter of their wealth) in this way.

THE COMING RAILWAY.

When he picked up the whole British Government and its friends and relations last year at the White City and carried them away on his one-line railway, we knew that the time for change had come. Mr. Louis Brennan had been out to Australia and home again, and it is all for the Empire's good.—“Ideas.”

CHEAPNESS OF THE TROLLEY OMNIBUS.

In an address at the Institution of Municipal Engineers on Saturday, Mr. Horace Boot said there were already thirty-three systems of electric trolley omnibuses in use on the Continent, and that similar systems were now running at Bradford at Leeds.

It is claimed that the system involves one-seventh of the capital expenditure involved by the systems of tramcars on rails, and that the running cost is half that of petrol omnibuses.

LOCAL PUBLIC-HOUSE NAMES.

Mr. Roland Austin, of Gloucester Public Library, has contributed to "Notes and Queries" a list of inns of Gloucestershire that are named after peers and baronets. The ex-Lord Lieutenant and the present Lord-Lieutenant are recognised in the Ducie Arms, Gloucester, and the Beauchamp Arms,

Dymock. Lord Beauchamp's family name of Lygon appears at Chipping Campden. The Duke of Beaufort is the name of a Cheltenham house, and there is a Beaufort Arms at Cheltenham, Gloucester, Kingswood, Mangotsfield, Stoke Gifford, and Wickwar. Next to the Duke of Beaufort's the most popular name seems to be that of Berkeley. There is a Berkeley Arms at Berkeley, Cam, Cheltenham, Gloucester, Hinton, and Tewkesbury. Amongst baronets whose names are found in the list are Sir Gerald Codrington and Sir Lionel Darell. Of course, there are many Royal personages represented, and among heroes none is so frequently mentioned as Nelson.

LORD-LIEUTENANT OF GLOUCESTER.

There has been some question as to whether Earl Beauchamp, who has succeeded Earl Ducie as Lord-Lieutenant of Gloucestershire, has also been appointed to the Lord-Lieutenancy of the city and county of Bristol, which office, as well as the Lord-Lieutenancy of the city of Gloucester, Lord Ducie combined with the Lord Lieutenancy of the county. When

Earl Beauchamp's appointment was announced in the "Gazette," there was no mention of any other office than that of the Lord-Lieutenancy of Gloucestershire, but a communication just received by the Town Clerk contains the intimation that in the letters patent granted to Lord Beauchamp he is described as Lord-Lieutenant of Gloucestershire and also of the city and county of Bristol and the city and county of Gloucester.

PUTTING ENERGY INTO ONE'S WORK.
In passing through shops, offices, factories, one is impressed by the sight of great numbers of employees who go through their days in a half-hearted and feeble manner, dawdling, moping about as though they had little ambition or little care as to whether the business they represented succeeded or failed. It is vital energy that counts. In going through a great establishment, one can easily tell those who will never get away from the typewriter, the ledger, or the counter. It takes ambition, energy, push, and determination to rise. It is a sorry sight to see young people doing their work in a half-hearted, ambitionless manner, looking upon it as drudgery, because these are symptoms, indications of their characters, earmarks of their future mediocrity.—"Girl's Own Paper."

AT A YEAR'S END.

Ye who have scorned each other,
Or injured friend or brother,
In this fast-fading year;
Ye who, by word or deed,
Have made a kind heart bleed,
Come gather here.

Let sinned against, and sinning,
Forget their strife's beginning,
And join in friendship now,
Be links no longer broken,
Be sweet forgiveness spoken
Under the holly bough.

Ye who have loved each other,
Sister and friend and brother,
In this fast-fading year;
Mother and sire and child,
Young man and maiden mild,
Come gather here;

And let your hearts grow fonder,
As memory shall ponder
Each past unbroken vow.
Old love and younger wooing
Are sweet in the renewing,
Under the holly bough.

Ye who have nourished sadness,
Estranged from hope and gladness,
In this fast-fading year;
Ye with o'erburthened mind,
Made aliens from your kind,
Come gather here.

Let not the useless sorrow
Pursues you night and morrow;
If e'er you hoped, hope now—
Take heart, uncloud your faces,
And join in our embraces
Under the holly bough.

—CHARLES MACKAY.

NO FOOD ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

PITIFUL STORY OF POVERTY.

A sad story of poverty was told at an inquest at Battersea on Wednesday on George Groves, aged 44, a labourer, of Haydon's-road, Wimbledon. It was stated that Groves was struck by a bough from a tree which he was assisting to fell. He was taken to Bolingbroke Hospital, where he died from internal hemorrhage.

The widow said that her husband had been unemployed since the week before the Coronation, and she had to work hard to keep him and her five children. She worked at a laundry four days a week, and was paid 2s. 6d. for a day of twelve hours. When the coroner's officer came to see her about the accident on Christmas Day she had neither fire nor food in the house, and he gave her 5s. out of his own pocket.

The Coroner said that it was very distressing that a woman had to go out to work for such a low wage. He had had an offer of help from a well-known charitable person in Battersea, and he hoped this would enable the woman to support her family.

A verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

Subsequently the Coroner's officer stated that when he went to the house on Christmas Day he found the children sitting round an empty fireplace crying with hunger, while the woman was weeping because she had no food to give them. All the food they had had for two days was half a loaf and a pennyworth of margarine.

A WONDERFUL PLANT.

By the side of dates, bananas, and pines, a Paris correspondent tells us, a new exotic has made its appearance. The fruit is not new to botanists, it is known as the papaya, and is a sort of melon. The flavour is described as like that of the best cantaloupe, the fruit possessing a delicious juice. Moreover, it possesses valuable therapeutic qualities, containing as it does a large percentage of pepsin. But the leaves are the most extraordinary part of the plant. It is said that the hardest beef steak, either wrapped in them for some time beforehand, or cooked with the leaves, at once becomes tender.
