News has reached England of the death at Bowral, New South Wales, of Capt. Alfred Spencer Heathcote, an Indian Mutiny hero, who in 1858 received the Victoria Cross. Born in London in 1832, Heathcote as a lieutenant served in the 60th Rifles during the Mutiny. During the seige of Delhi in 1857 he volunteered for services of extreme danger, especially during the six days of the assault by the British troops, when severe fighting took place in the streets of the city. He was mentioned in despatches, and was elected by the officers of his regiment for the coveted decoration.

Original copies of any "Chronicle and Graphic" photos may be obtained, price 1/3 each unmounted, 8 1/6 mounted. Special prices for quantities.

LITERARY REVIEW.

POPULAR SCHOOL BOOKS.

So far as can be judged from the return of books chosen as school prizes, the relative popularity of a select company of favourites varies little among London children from year to year. In 1910, and again last year, "Anderson's Fairy Tales" easily stood first, "Robinson Crusoe" taking the second place, and "Tom Brown's Schooldays" the third. The remainder of the list of "most popular books," taken from a report presented to the County Council Education Committee and reproduced below, shows some variations, but on the whole the degree of favour enjoyed by the various volumes approximates very closely in the two periods:—

"MY RECOLLECTIONS OF THE SEPOY REVOLT." By Mrs. Muter.

The lady who writes this book was at Meerut on the fateful 10th of May, 1857, and saw the outbreak with which the great war began. Her husband, who distinguished himself in the subsequent fighting, was a captain in the 60th Rifles. The chief interest of her book lies in her account of Delhi, which she entered soon after its capture by Sir Arch-dale Wilson, and in which she remained for some time. Her story of the city's desolation, of the trial of some of the ringleaders in the revolt (of very high position some of them), including the old King, and of the various incidents, small and large, which added excitement to the life of a European lady in the place where so many brave men had recently fallen, has the vividness which an intelligent eye-witness's narrative always possesses. The stay in the Murree Hills, where Captain Muter was for a time in command of one of the convalescent depots, is also interesting. The section on the Rohilcund Campaign might well have been spared—indeed, since it tells us nothing that is not told elsewhere, it seems to have been put in merely to make the book larger. Mrs. Muter ventures to judge on some disputed points, such as the everlasting question whether the European troops at Meerut should have pursued the escaped rebel soldiers to Delhi at once. But these matters are not really faced. It is in the account of life in Delhi that the real interest of the volume is found.—"Daily News."

"ONE AND ALL GARDENING, 1912." Edited by Edward Owen Greening. London: Agricultural and Horticultural Association. Price 2d.

In an opening article the editor propounds a far-reaching plan for developing the work of horticultural societies throughout the kingdom. There are over 1,000 of such societies, with probably a quarter of a million members, many of them expert and enthusiastic horticulturists. Mr. Greening suggests that, in addition to holding flower shows and awarding prizes for cultural excellence, these societies should become centres of teaching and helpfulness, playing a leading part in converting Britain into a garden land. Hon. H. A. Stanhope contributes interesting rose notes; Mrs. Edwards-Webb writes on "The Call of the Waste Lands"; Mr. James Crabtree on Shore Gardens; Mr. W. Francis Rankine on The Fowls of the Air, and Mr. S. Leonard Bastin on The Growing of Christmas Trees. A very interesting article on "A Beautiful Garden Pest," by Mr. James Scott, describes and illustrates the genesis of the tiger moth throughout all its life-changes. Mr. Herbert G. Mace has a suggestive and useful contribution on Bee-keeping in Small Gardens. Other articles deal with grass walks, hoeing, manuring, and other detailed subjects. The Annual is neatly got up and attractively illustrated on every one of its 128 pages. It is a remarkable production for its modest price, and the first edition of 100,000 copies, largely ordered in advance, will probably be promptly sold.

1.—The new Ambulance Carriage presented to the town by the Leslie Young trustees, used at this meeting for the first time. Its aid was most opportune for both Mr. Peter Roberts and Mr. F. Brown, who received serious brain injuries by being thrown, were conveyed home in it. 2.—The scenes in paddock and club enclosure on both days were brilliant, fashionably dressed ladies being present in great numbers. In photos 2, 3, 5, and 6 are scraps of pretty or original hats worn by various ladies. The lady on left in No. 3 was the centre of much attraction, her hat—of black and white material—being of turban shape, with stiffened ribbon standing in a kind of plume on top. In No. 4 picture is Mr. Bob Sievier with a lady friend, walking round the paddock. [Photos by Cheltenham Newspaper Co., Ltd.]

ART FOR THE MASSES.

One of the most sumptuously-housed art collections of the nation is that belonging to the ancient borough of Preston, where the fine pile of buildings known as the Harris Free Public Library, Museum, and Art Gallery contains an artistic and literary collection of great value. The story of this remarkable institution is told in the March "Windsor Magazine," in an article which is accompanied by no fewer than fifteen fine art reproductions from works by notable modern artists, together with a finely-printed coloured plate from Laslett Pott's charming picture of "Priscilla," the heroine of Longfellow's poem "The Courtship of Miles Standish." Mr. W. B. Barton says, in the course of his article—

"It is a mere truism to say that those entrusted with the building up of a public art collection have a task of more than ordinary difficulty to perform. A private collector may, in his selection, disregard tastes other than his own; but those who cater for the community at large must provide a collection having an all-round interest, as well as maintaining a high standard of art; for their clientele embraces many and widely different classes, ranging from the well-educated connoisseur and student down to the mere seeker in search of distraction, who may at times be heard exclaiming 'I don't know much about art, but I do know what I like'—an assertion which probably means no more than that his likes are limited to that to which he has grown accustomed in a somewhat narrow experience of the subject, and which he discredits any truth, uttered in the language of art, when it is unfamiliar to him. It is to be educated into a fuller appreciation of art, when one must induce him by some means to direct his attention dwell upon good work; and here a topical picture has its mission, provided that it possesses, in addition to a story, intrinsic value as a painting. If this condition be fulfilled, the story may serve as a lure, drawing him within the influence of the æsthetic charm of the work. Its qualities as a work of art may then captivate him sooner or later, since we needs must love the highest when we see it."

A MENACE TO EVERY WOMAN.

All mistresses of households should read the Editor's strong protest in the "Girl's Own Paper" against the present system adopted by certain of the "Government valuers" in demanding instant admission to inspect every corner of the house, at nine o'clock in the morning, without any previous intimation being given the householder. The Editor says:—"Now, putting aside all question of legality, I am sure I am voicing the opinion of every mistress of a household when I say that it is positively outrageous that the privacy of the home should be invaded in any such manner. Is it reasonable that an unknown man should be empowered to demand an entrance into one's very scullery in the morning, and into every bedroom in the house, just whenever he chooses to call, even though he may claim to have the authority of the law for so doing? When you remember that no one but the mistress of the house would think of entering a servant's bedroom, and even she does not do so when the maid is reliable and can be trusted to keep it properly cleaned, isn't it scandalous if a man can arrive at the front door and walk into the servants' bedrooms without so much as asking their leave?"

Mr. and Mrs. W. V. White, of Freemantle, Southampton, have just celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of their wedding. Mr. White claims to be the last survivor of the old mail-coach guards appointed in 1857.

While hunting with the New Forest Foxhounds near Lyndhurst on Tuesday, Mr. Brazier, who had been staying at the Crown Hotel, Lyndhurst, was thrown from his horse and killed.

WHEN'S A DOCTOR NOT A "DR."?

What practitioners should be addressed as "Dr." and what as "Mr."? First, let it be stated that by a convention which obtains in this country he who practises as a surgeon (in any branch of surgery) is addressed as "Mr.," even though he may actually be a Doctor of Medicine (M.D.). As a rule surgeons are not M.D., for those who intend to take up surgery as a speciality carefully refrain from acquiring that degree. They often become M.B.; but as a rule, to which there are exceptions, they go no further in university status. This brings us to the relation of the M.B. and the M.D. The latter is merely a development of the former. The M.B. degree (Bachelor of Medicine) of any British university is a fully registrable qualification, and many practitioners (surgeons and others as well) never proceed to the higher degree. To obtain the latter is at some universities a matter of examination; at others a matter of original research. Taking a broad view, it must be allowed that there is no real superiority implied in being M.D. over him who is M.B. of the same university. There are wide differences in the standards required at the individual universities; but the idea that the M.D. is ipso facto a cleverer or more experienced man than the M.B. is quite a delusion. Now he who is M.D. is properly addressed as Dr.; that is beyond dispute. As a convention, once more, he who is M.B. is granted the courtesy title of Dr., to which he has strictly no right. Should such a M.B. be a surgeon, he does not take advantage of this courtesy; but otherwise as a rule he does. To discuss in extenso the merits of these degrees as granted at rival universities would be to venture on very thin ice. All that can safely be said is that there are wide variations in the standard of proficiency required for the degrees of the different universities; and that in the estimation of laymen the M.D. of

The quintessence of advertising is reaching buyers. Upon the selection of publicity mediums which perform this all-important service largely depends the success or failure of advertising.

There are of course other considerations, but the main issue when an advertiser has a meritorious product or commodity is to place his goods before the people who are able and willing to buy.

The business producing ability of the "Chronicle and Graphic" rests in the representative and the well-to-do calibre of its readers, and advertisers are finding them particularly and promptly responsive. Run a trial order and judge for yourself.

London University is the highest of these honours, and that the authorities and graduates of Oxford, Cambridge, and Edinburgh Universities are not disposed to concede this fancied superiority. — "The Hospital."

LITERARY REVIEW.

BOOKS TO ORDER AT THE LIBRARY.

- "THE PRINCIPAL GIRL," by J. C. Snaith, author of "Araminta."
- "MARIE," by H. Rider Haggard.
- "A QUEEN OF CASTAWAYS," by John Barnett.
- "THE FOREST ON THE HILL," by Eden Phillpotts.
- "MR. WYCHERLEY'S WARD," by Mr. L. Allen Harker.
- "LIFE AND LETTERS OF JOHN RICKMAN," by Orlo Williams.
- "FOR THE QUEEN," by E. Phillips Oppenheim.
- "THE MAKING OF WESTERN EUROPE."

The large number who have taken a fresh interest in history from the original methods of Mr. C. R. L. Fletcher will undoubtedly by his new book, which traces the fortunes of the children of the Roman Empire. Mr. Fletcher has embarked on a subject which is unexplored territory for the ordinary reader. The history is published by Murray. The price is 7s. 6d.

GEORGE THE THIRD AND CHARLES FOX: The Concluding Part of "The American Revolution." By the Right Hon. Sir George Otto Trevelyan, Bart., O.M. Two vols. Vol. I. (Longmans, 7s. 6d. net).

Our historian proceeds in his accustomed leisurely way, but that method has its compensations. If the nine new chapters, strictly speaking, give us only about two or two and a half years of history, from 1778 to 1780, ending with the treachery and flight of Benedict Arnold, they leave room for a gallery of admirable portraits, including Chatham, Fox, and George III., and a succession of interesting dissertations on such subjects as the social life and tastes of the aristocracy of the eighteenth century. Here, of course, Sir George is at his best. The volume opens with a chapter, sketched in broad outline on a large canvas in the manner learnt from Macaulay, of the situation of England in the spring of 1778, the system of personal government which had brought it about, and the call for Chatham to which it led. And that is the opportunity of reviewing at some length Chatham's methods as a Minister, before describing his attitude in his last years, his final appearance and death, and the public feeling about him."—"The Times."

"CELESTE."

A book for the railway bookstall is "The Manœuvres of Celeste," by M. E.-G. Its hundred short pages are crammed full of excitement and melodrama, such as one somehow associates with the railway novel. Published by a new firm—Evelyn Denman and Co., Ltd., London—it is one of the neatest little publications we have ever come across.

"CAUSERIES OF ENGLISH PEWTER," by A. de Navarre. "Country Life" Offices, 10s. 6d.

Collectors of pewter—"poor man's silver"—will appreciate the work which M. de Navarre has put into this book. It is not unlikely that it may lead those who have not yet felt the attraction of pewter to begin the study of a thoroughly English art.

"THE PALL MALL MAGAZINE."

There is local interest in the April "Pall Mall," as it includes an article written by a very well-known sporting writer describing the adventures of a big game hunter. The hero of the article is Col. Tickell, of Cheltenham, noted as a cavalry officer, revolver shot, fencer, and big game shot. Thrilling stories are given of scares and scurries caused by the unexpected appearance of lions and lionesses in East and Central Africa. Stories of snakes, hippos, rhinos, and elephants crowd a dozen interesting and well-illustrated pages. Amongst several other entertaining articles is "Mr. Balfour at Leisure," by his political opponent and personal admirer, Harold Spender; and "Borrowed Fashions," in which it is shown that the fashions of 1912 are reproducing those of Early Victorian days. A comparison is made of fashion plates of 1842 and seventy years after.

WEST AND EAST.

- "CANADA," by A. G. Bradley—
- "PEOPLES AND PROBLEMS OF INDIA," by Sir T. W. Holderness, K.C.S.I. Home University Library.

Within the compass of these two small books, at a price which brings them within the reach of nearly everyone, lies the cream of the romance of the Empire. They are both written with great knowledge—Sir Thomas Holderness is one of the heads of the India Office, and Mr. Bradley talks with the familiarity of old friendship of all parts of the Dominion—and after much the same plan, first sketching the geographical divisions and features, then the history, and finally the great political and social characteristics. But what utterly different pictures the two writers produce! Canada, only now discovering the immensity of its resources, and setting itself to the building up of a free, white, self-directing Commonwealth. India, still for the most part buried in the past, with its medley of races and religions, its alien Government above and its caste and archaic agriculture beneath. Yet, in a deeper than any merely political sense, both these extremes are or should be connected in our minds by the sense of a common duty arising from a common heritage. Let even so much as is set down here, so attractively and skilfully, be known to every citizen and all who will presently claim citizenship, and not a few of the problems which Sir Thomas Holderness describes will be far on the way to solution.

"THE MATADOR OF THE FIVE TOWNS," by Arnold Bennett. Methuen, 6s.

Once again Mr. Bennett gives us stories of the Midland manufacturing towns. Admirers of Mr. Arnold Bennett are now very numerous and will hasten to get the latest product of his hard-worked pen.

"MY THREE BIG FLIGHTS," by M. André Beaumont.

The greatest living aviator is undoubtedly M. André Beaumont, the sailor who won the Paris to Rome fight, the European, and the British circuits. He has written a book on his experiences (published by Nash, 10s. net), in simple, unaffected style. Describing the end of that close race round Great Britain, which he won by so little he says:—"Now that the race was over, and that the prize was mine, I was rather mortified at not experiencing deeper emotions at my success. This was surely due to the amount of physical energy I must have expended. But I soon recovered my equanimity. As soon as I had climbed down from my seat it was a relief to me not to have to bother about my motor, and whilst my faithful flying machine was taken to its shed under a police escort I handed over my book of the route and gave myself up into the hands of the sportsmen present. Lord Northcliffe congratulated me in a manner that I shall long remember. At the same time the crowd carried me to my shed. One of the stewards called out for silence, as he was going to speak. He declared that every part of my aeroplane and motor was intact. Immediately there was a shout 'Speech, speech!' I understood what they were asking me for. Steps were brought, and, standing on them, I thanked the crowd in an English of my own, which everybody did his best to understand."

THE PEOPLE'S BOOKS.

PUBLISHED BY T. C. & E. C. JACK.

Of the manufacture of reprints of the works of the great writers there has been no end. Reprints represent in the main the work of the last generation. Their value no one questions, but we live in a world that moves on and moves rapidly, to the conquest of new knowledge. More rapidly than of yore, therefore, the old standards become antiquated, while the conditions of modern life demand at every turn some acquaintance with the most recent results of investigation. Yet no attempt has been made to throw open to all the treasures of Science, Philosophy, History, and Literature which are known to scholars of the present generation.

- The following are now published:—
- "BOTANY: THE MODERN STUDY OF PLANTS," by M. C. Stopes, D.Sc., Ph.D. F.L.S.
- "HEREDITY," by J. A. S. Watson, B.Sc.
- "ORGANIC CHEMISTRY," by Professor J. B. Cohen, B.Sc., F.R.S.
- "THE PRINCIPLES OF ELECTRICITY," by Norman R. Campbell, M.A.
- "THE SCIENCE OF THE STARS," by E. W. Maunder, F.R.A.S., of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.
- "HENRI BERGSON: THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHANGE," by H. Wildon Carr.
- "ROMAN CATHOLICISM," by H. B. Coxon. Preface, Mgr. R. H. Benson.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS' NEW NOVEL:

"THE FOREST ON THE HILL."

JUST OUT, 6s.

"... It is a book that, despite criticism, one feels affection for and leaves with regret."—"Evening Standard."

"There are scenes, such as the exquisite troth-plighting of Drusilla and her lover in the forest at dawn, that have only been equalled by George Meredith."—"Observer."

"The very first page assures the reader that his author is in his best and purest element—never stronger, never fresher, never more absorbing, never more thought-compelling, and above and before all else, never so eloquent. . . . To say that Mr. Eden Phillpotts has given his very best work is praise indeed, but it can heartily be given."—"T.P.'s Weekly."

A New Novel by the Author of "Miss Esperance and Mr. Wycherly."

"MR. WYCHERLY'S WARDS."

BY MRS. L. ALLEN HARKER.

Third Impression. 6s.

"Brilliant piece of work, full of delicate humour, clever character drawing, and no little of unforced and tender pathos. . . . Not many works nowadays possess originality and charm of freshness which characterise this author's delightful work."—"Liverpool Post."

"Then Jane Anne, one of the most fascinating child-creations in modern fiction comes on the scene. Jane Anne is a thing by turn and nothing long, but always fascinating, natural, and interesting. . . . will delight those who now make her acquaintance, and once to have known Jane Anne is to have her ever in remembrance. Many delicate touches illuminate these wherein, too, is much quiet humour, and few will lay aside the book, we fancy, without feeling that they would like to have visited at that house in Holywell."—"The World."

The Rev. J. H. Harris, who has been abroad for a year in the Congo and the cocoa islands, says the Belgian Governments have practically succeeded in putting a stop in the Congo to the brutalities which roused the conscience of Europe. With regard to Angola and San Thome, he saw no alternative but to urge the Portuguese Government to liberate the whole 30,000 or 40,000 slaves on the cocoa plantations within the specified period.

THE COTSWOLD HUNT ANNUAL POINT-TO-POINT RACES, HELD AT SWINDON, MARCH 21, 1912.

The feature of the meeting was the mud and slush, the weather being simply atrocious, and everyone came away with a generous supply of Mother Earth on their boots and stockings.

1.—Visitors passing into the ground through a gap in the hedge, over an old gate. The proper gateway was flooded with mud and water.

2.—Watching the racing.
3.—Towing a motor-car out with cart horses. Practically every car got stuck.
4.—Some of the crowd.

5.—Mr. Jessop's (M.H.) car stuck in the ground.
6.—Well-known supporters of the Cotswold Hunt.

BODDINGTON HARRIERS POINT-TO-POINT RACES, HELD AT LEIGH, NEAR CHELTENHAM, MARCH 27, 1912.

Everything conspired to make this little meeting a brilliant success. The weather was glorious, entries very good, racing fine, and a record attendance from Cheltenham, Gloucester, Tewkesbury, and the neighbourhood.

- 1.—Using a wagon for a grand stand.
- 2.—Leading in Our Phillip Major Purvis (owner) up, after winning Open Race.
- 3.—Mr. T. Jessop, the popular Master, on Rescommen, who finished second in Open Race.

- 4.—Mr. Byard, Mr. Geo. Hannis, and Mr. Tom Hewinson (owner of Miss Morin).
- 5.—Mr. W. Blandford unsaddling Miss Morin after a fine display of horsemanship in winning Farmers' Welter Race. He was thrown once, the man riding on him, but he remained and, after catching

- 6.—Paddy IX., Mr. B. Eaton up, coming over last fence but one in Farmers' Lightweight Race. He only won by half a length from Schemer.
- 7.—Ladies chatting in paddock.
- 8.—Mrs. Jessop talking to Mr. Brookes, of Uckington.
- 9.—Coming over a fence in Farmers' Lightweight Race. Mr. Blandford, on Lazy Bores, in front.

LITERARY REVIEW.

A DISTINGUISHED FAMILY.

The fine art feature of the April "Windsor Magazine" consists of a survey of the career and work of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, which is accompanied by no fewer than 16 admirable reproductions from some of his finest pictures, together with a coloured plate reproduced in facsimile from the original of his most famous masterpiece, "Dante's Dream." The portrait of Rossetti, by G. F. Watts, R.A., is also reproduced. In the course of the article the writer says:—

"Although born and educated in London, Dante Gabriel Rossetti was by heredity and temperament almost entirely Italian. Moreover, there was Italian literature in his pedigree, for his father, Gabriele Rossetti, was a poet of distinction, whose exile from his native country, where he had been keeper of antique bronzes at the Naples Museum, was in part due to the fervour of the songs which he wrote for the revolutionary patriots of his day, as well as to his active share in their political campaign. In the course of his life of honourable exile in England, Gabriele Rossetti became the author of several further works, the more important of them devoted to the study of Dante, in addition to occupying, for some fourteen years, the professorial chair for Italian language and literature at King's College, London. On his mother's side, Dante Gabriel Rossetti was but partly English, for she was a Miss Polidori, daughter, by his marriage with an English wife, of an Italian father, the Gaetano Polidori associated with the work of the Italian poet, Alfieri. Her brother was the Dr. John Polidori who travelled on the Continent with Lord Byron in 1816, and so met Shelley. He was himself the author of a couple of novels and two volumes of poems.

"The eldest child of Gabriele and Frances Rossetti was a daughter, Maria Francesca, who grew up to write 'A Shadow of Dante' and other works. Then came a son, christened Gabriel Charles Dante, but afterwards to become famous as Dante Gabriel Rossetti, then another son, William Michael, happily still surviving to enjoy a reputation for distinguished services to English literature in the domain of critical and biographical work, and, lastly, Christina Georgina Rossetti, whose exquisitely spiritual poetry must live as long as the best in English literature endures."

The April "Windsor Magazine" is an attractively varied Easter Number, packed with complete stories for holiday reading as well as articles of particular interest and value. A complete story, longer than her recent magazine work, is contributed by S. Macnaughtan, the author of "The Fortune of Christina Macnab," "The Expensive Miss Du Cane," and other widely popular novels of modern life, Fred M. White is represented by one of his most ingenious mystery stories, Charles Marriott contributes a charming love story with a very original plot.

Holiday Haunts in England and Wales.

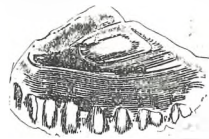

The Official Guide (3d.) of the Great Western Railway to holiday haunts for Season 1912 is now ready. Full particulars of the accommodation which is everywhere waiting to supply the needs of holiday makers and travellers generally are included in some six hundred odd well-written and well-illustrated pages. Obviously a wonderful production of this kind is part of the enterprise of the railway company, and cannot be produced for the sum asked for it; for it is one of the most charming handbooks on picturesque England which we have seen. Local beauty spots are represented by new and charming photographs. Thus we have Montpellier Gardens, giving a pretty glimpse from a corner not usually patronised by photographers; Cleeve Hill; the Golden Valley, Stroud; Cirencester Market-place; Severn Bridge; Sir Francis Drake's House; the Keep, Berkeley Castle, Lydbrook; and a peep in the Forest of Dean. This volume brings back pleasing memories of past holidays and makes easy the choice of a future holiday.
