PICTURESQUE GLOUCESTERSHIRE: EBRINGTON

Ebrington, or Ebberton, is an old-world village on the road from Chipping Campden to Shipston-on-Stour, about two miles from Chipping Campden and on the borders of Gloucestershire. It has come into prominence lately by being mentioned in the wireless programmes as famous for quaint sayings attributed to its inhabitants. Sir John Fortescue, Chief Justice of the King's Bench in 1442, lived and died here, and was buried in the chancel in 1476, aged 90 years.. The title of the eldest sons of the Earls Fortescue is taken from this place.

- 1.—The Church of St. Eadburgha. The south door is of fine Norman work, and in the church is a recumbent effigy of the famous Sir John Fortescue.
- 2.—A view of the village from the village green. Three oaks are planted here.

- 3.—Rosebank—picturesque thatched cottages.
- 4.—The village has many fine thatched cottages.
- 5.—A fine old fireplace with chimney corners in the Ebrington Arms, the village inn.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, CHELTENHAM, SOCIAL PARTY

A well attended social party was held at the Parish Room on Monday evening, when most of the workers and young people were present. Prizes were given for fancy dresses. Some of the party present, those at the bottom being in fancy dress. "Cheltenham Chronicle" Photographs. Copies 1s. and 1s. 9d. each.

CHARLTON KINGS CLUB AND INSTITUTE MEMBERS' PARTY TO CHILDREN

The members' party to children was held in the St. Clair Ford Hall on Monday, January 1. The party at tea.

CHELTENHAM CHEMISTS' PARTY TO CHILDREN AT TOWN HALL

A very jolly children's party was given in the supper room of the Cheltenham Town Hall by Cheltenham chemists and friends.
 1.—Mrs. Clark's, Mrs. Percy James's, and Mrs. Marshall's party. 2.—Mrs. Gregory's party. 3.—Mrs. Forley's party. 4.—Miss Hawley's and Mrs. Eustance's party.

CHELTENHAM ALL-THE-YEAR-ROUND BATHERS

EXTRAORDINARY TREE GROWTH IN A LAMP.

This tree can be seen growing in a street
lamp in Ebrington, near Chipping Campden.
By its size it must be of some years' growth and it has forced branches out through the interstices of the ornamental top and through the bottom of the lamp. The glass sides are still in position. It would be interesting to know if roots are carried through the hollow pillar to the ground.

PICTURESQUE GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—ICOMB

Icomb is a small and secluded village about three miles from Stow-on-the-Wold. Half of it was formerly in the county of Worcestershire, being an island village, but Icomb and Church Icomb are now united and in Gloucestershire. Icomb Place, the old manor house, originally built about 1254 and remodelled by the father of Sir John Blaket, who owned it, is now the residence of Capt. G. H. Simpson-Hayward, the former Worcestershire and England bowler. Rudder, in 1779, says "the large manor house of the Copes is now in decay and occupied by one of the farmers." It has been carefully restored by Captain Simpson-Hayward, and the grounds laid out as a picturesque rock garden. Sir John Blaket, who is said to have fought at Agincourt in 1415, is buried in the Blaket Chapel of the church under a recumbent marble effigy.
