EXCAVATIONS AT NOTGROVE LONG BARROW

Important and interesting discoveries have been made during the second seasons excavations at Notgrove Long Barrow by Mrs. E. M. Clifford, of Witcombe, assisted by a party of Cambridge graduates and others. The sections which were excavated were open for public inspection on Saturday, and provided a rare opportunity for seeing the real structure and nature of the Cotswold long barrows.

Top.—A general view of the Barrow, looking towards Notgrove Station.
 Bottom (left).—A splendid example of the dry walling forming the outer edge of the Barrow, which curves round to make a horned entrance at the East end. This walling was placed here perhaps 4,000 years ago by ancient Britons.
 Bottom (right).—Mrs. E. M. Clifford, with another expert, in the circular structure at the Western end, in which were found the bones of a girl of 17 to 19 years of age. This "rotunda" is composed of large stones faced with dry walling, and is a unique feature in British long barrows.

COTSWOLD AERO CLUB GARDEN PARTY AND RECEPTION

This event, held on Saturday at the Club's flying field on the Gloucester-road, proved very successful, although weather conditions were unsettled. There were several visitors by air from Bristol, Reading, London and elsewhere. One of the most attractive and interesting of the visiting 'planes was a B.A. Swallow, which proved very successful in the demonstration flights. Top.—A happy crowd of club members and friends. Bottom.—A 'plane just about to take off after being inspected. In cockpit is Mr. J. D. H. Slade, the club instructor.

RADIO EXHIBITION OPENS IN CHELTENHAM

Cheltenham's Radiolympia opened this week at The Imperial Rooms (behind the Fountain), and the most comprehensive range of radio receivers and radiogramophones in the County is exhibited there. The new season's models of "His Master's Voice," Pye, Philips, Marconi, Ekco, Bush, McMichael and G.E.C. are tastefully displayed, and demonstrations can be arranged. Organised by Messrs. Dale, Forty and Co., Ltd., the well-known radio specialists, the Exhibition is open daily from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and will continue for a week or so. Our photograph shows a section of the attractive display made. Business people are making a point of visiting the Exhibition during their lunch hour.

CHELLENHAM FROM THE AIR, NO. 2: CHELTENHAM COLLEGE AND SURROUNDINGS

This view of Cheltenham gives a wonderful impression of the beauty the town gains from the profusion of its trees. They are everywhere. In the centre is the College with its fine playing field. The boys can be seen playing cricket at the nets in front of the Gymnasium on left. To the left is the Junior College and its playing field; in the bottom left, Cotswold and its fine garden. Beyond the College, in centre, is the Ashburne Bowling Green; and to the right of it Montpellier Gardens, the Queen's Hotel and the Winter Garden, Thirlestaine-road and Suffolk-road (left) and Sandford-road (right) and their continuations pass right through the picture. The whole of the General Hospital block of buildings is seen on bottom right.

MANY CHANGES — YET STILL THE SAME

Crowd awaiting the opening in 1892.

Mr. William J. Pugh with his son (Mr. H. W. F. Pugh) and grandson (Mr. H. V. Pugh).

On September 9, 1892, there was opened at 341 High Street, Cheltenham, a new business venture which, as will be seen from the portion of an old photograph reproduced above, created considerable interest. Mr. William J. Pugh, a young man of 25, had, after thoroughly learning the butcher's business, decided to open on his own account under the title of the "Meat Kings." He announced his determination to provide the people with meat of the best quality, but at prices which were very much below those ruling elsewhere. Housewives (and husbands, too) took him at his word, found that his claims were justified, and so was laid the foundation of a business into which, in the course of time, Mr. Pugh was able to bring his own son, Mr. H. W. F. Pugh, who has ever had before him the trust with which a constantly increasing list of customers, not only in Cheltenham but throughout the district, looked upon the "Meat Kings" as "our butchers." This week the son's son, Mr. H. V. Pugh, attains his majority after having been thoroughly taught the business and imbued with its ideals, and as our photograph shows there are thus three generations actively engaged in the shop to-day. The tradition of a personal interest in each customer is really carried out, and Mr. Pugh the grandfather says that apart from the changes of fashion, which no man can keep up sides with, the woman of to-day is very much the same as in 1892. "Both then and now the chief concern is the well-being of their families, and they believe in the old saying, 'Better pay the butcher than the doctor.'" The explanation of the "Meat Kings" continued success is simply that the firm have satisfied these keen customers that the original slogan "best quality, lowest prices, and civility" is as true to-day as in 1892.

THE GREAT GALE IN CHELTEMHAM AND DISTRICT

The great September gale that raged throughout Southern England on Monday night played havoc with many of the trees of Cheltenham. Branches were stripped off all over the town and several of the trees were laid low.

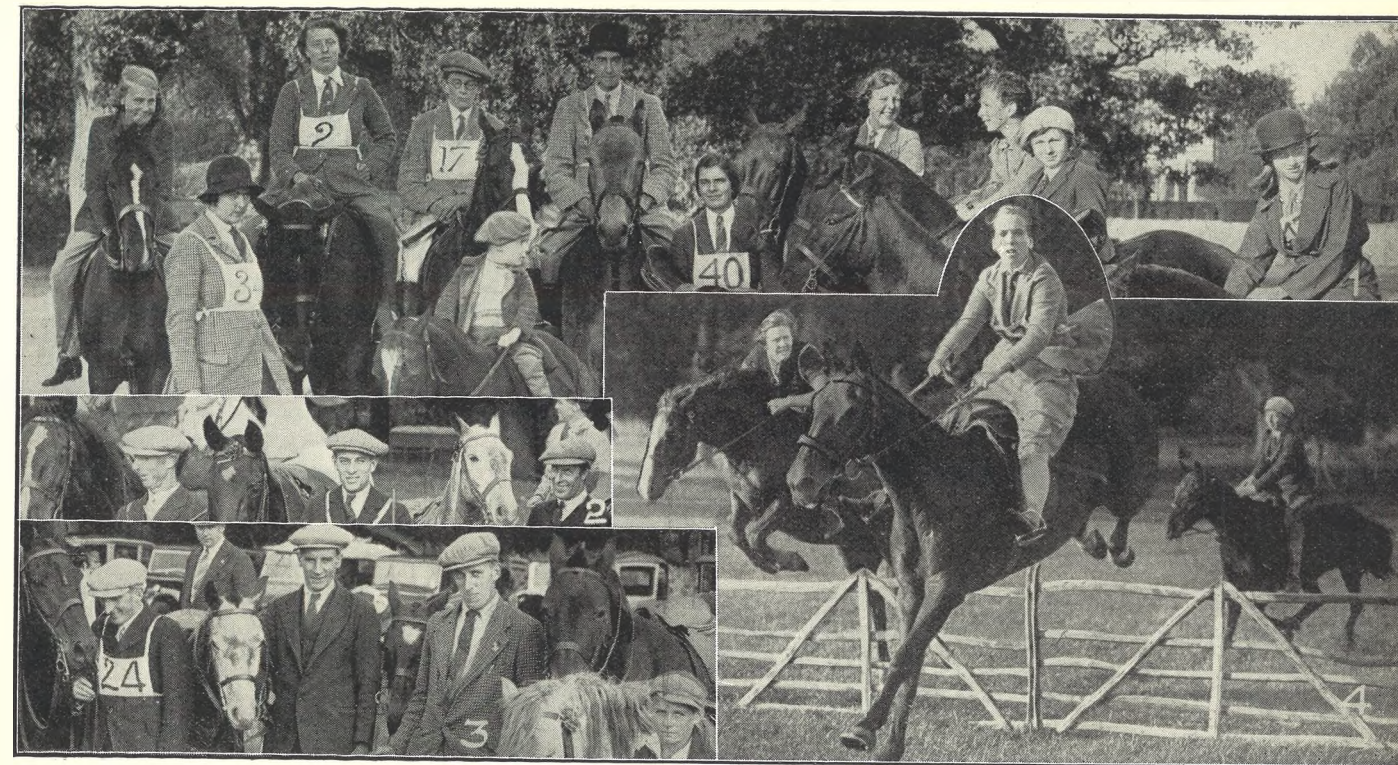

- 1.—One of the big elms on the northern side of the lake in Marle Hill annexe was broken off and fell across the railings.
- 2.—Getting another fallen trunk out of the children's boating pool at Pittville.
- 3.—The top of an elm brought down the telephone wires at Boddington.
- 4.—An uprooting in Queen's-parade, near Savoy Hotel.

RIVER BAPTISM AT TWYNING

The very rare occurrence of women being baptised by total immersion in a river was witnessed on Saturday afternoon in the River Avon at Twynning. Five women were baptised by Mr. J. Lewis, a Gospel missionary, of Cardiff. Here are three stages of the ceremony.

- 1.—Mr. J. Lewis, with one of the women totally immersed.
- 2.—Helping the baptised woman to the bank.
- 3.—Bringing her up the bank at St. Chad's Well—the Twynning bathing place.

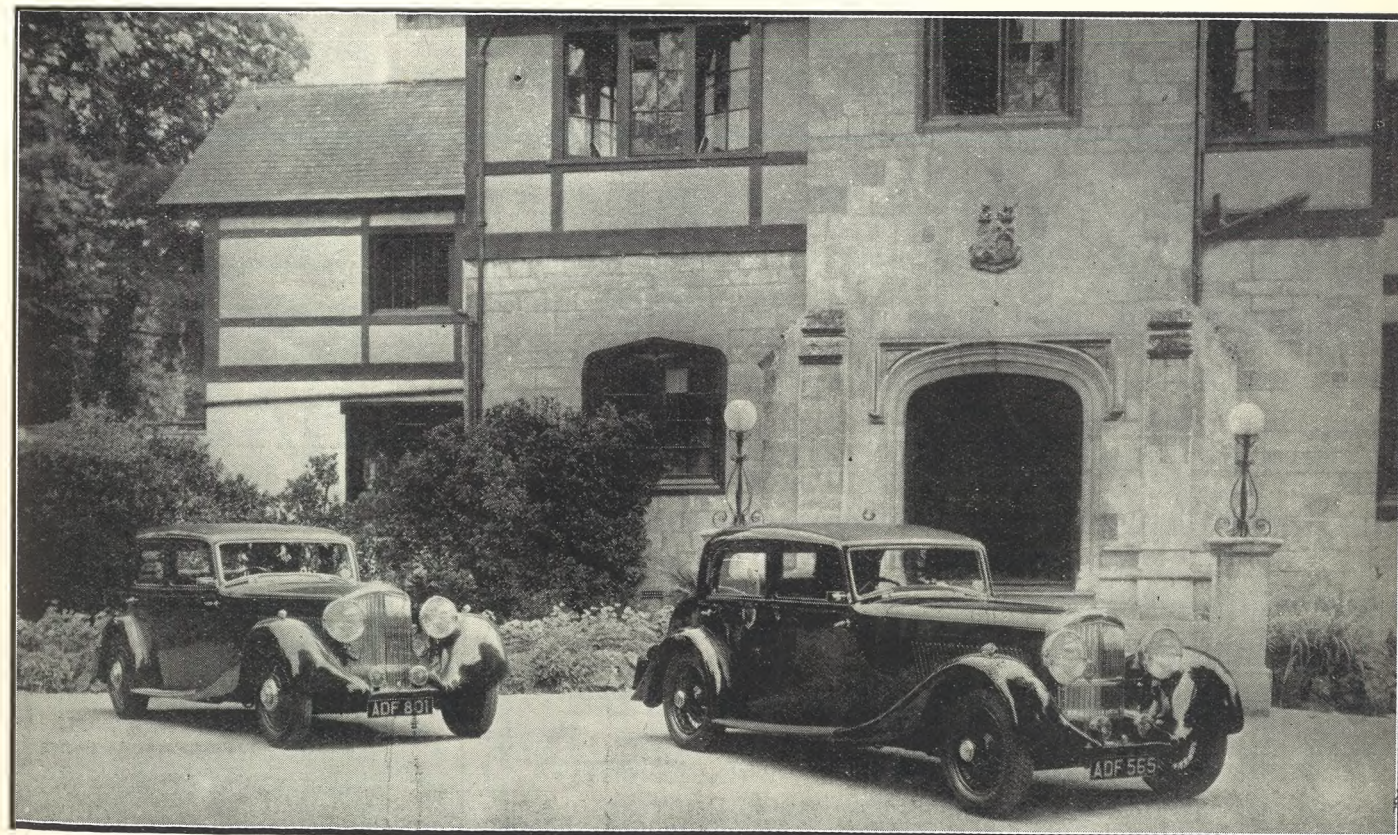

OVERBURY GYMKHANA

The annual gymkhana held at Overbury Brake on Saturday afternoon was arranged by Messrs. E. and T. Holland-Martin in aid of the Croome Hunt Poultry Fund.
