TEWKESBURY SCHOOLBOY GARDENERS

Much encouragement has been given by the education authorities in Gloucestershire to schools to cultivate their own gardens. The pupils of Tewkesbury Senior Council School have probably one of the largest school gardens in the country, which is beautifully cultivated. Together with their own garden, they are turning up other plots on the Cotteswold gardens, making in all 3½ acres. The school runs a shop, where the older girls sell the produce to their parents and others, and the scheme is self-supporting.

1. Mr. A. E. Leatham, Headmaster, giving the boys a lesson in the garden. 2. Three smiling faces at the school shop.
 3. Hard at work in the big garden at various jobs. The boys are exceedingly keen, and often come back in their own time to work on their various plots. 4.—A lesson in handling currant bushes. 5.—Five of the girls seeing to the rhubarb at the school "shop." 6.—Attending to one of the several hives of bees.
